Rosenstein denies reports he raised 'removal' of president

BY MICHAEL BALSAMO
AND ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein discussed secretly recording President Donald Trump last year amid law enforcement concerns about chaos in the White House, according to people familiar with exchanges at the time. But one person who was present said Rosenstein was being sarcastic. Rosenstein's comments were first reported Friday by The New York Times. Trump spoke later Friday of a "lingering stench" at the Justice Department, though he didn't name names. The Times also said Rosenstein raised the idea of using the 25th Amendment to remove Trump as unfit for office. Rosenstein called the Times story "inaccurate and factually incorrect." "I never pursued or authorized recording the President and any suggestion that I have ever advocated for the removal of the President is absolutely false," he said in a statement Friday night. The reports create greater uncertainty for Rosenstein in his position at a time when Trump has lambasted Justice Department leadership and publicly humiliated both him and Attorney General Jeff Sessions. It's also the latest revelation that could affect Robert Mueller, the special counsel investigating possible coordination between Russia and Trump's presidential campaign in 2016. Sessions recused himself from that issue soon after he took office, to Trump's dismay, and Rosenstein later appointed Mueller. With all that hanging in the air, Trump has resisted calls from conservative commentators to fire Sessions and Rosenstein and appoint someone who would ride herd more closely on Mueller or dismiss him. The reported conversation about possibly secretly recording the president took place at a tense May 2017 meeting during the tumultuous period that followed Trump's firing of FBI Director James Comey, a decision that upset many rank-and-file agents and that the White House said

Major League Baseball investigates after former wife levels claims in blog post

For more than a year, Cubs shortstop Addison Russell has operated under the cloud of an ongoing domestic abuse investigation by Major League Baseball, but the matter gained fresh impetus late Thursday night when his former wife, Melisa Reidy-Russell, accused of him laying "his hands on me" in a blog post linked to her Instagram account. By Friday afternoon, MLB had placed Russell on "paid administrative leave" as it began to investigate the new allegations. "Well, obviously we take it very, very seriously. It's something we're very concerned about," Cubs Chairman Tom

School administrators in the Chicago area praised the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's launch this week of a new campaign warning kids about the dangers of vaping, arguing that local efforts — including one suburban district's development of an anti-vaping curriculum with a $20,000 grant from a major e-cigarette manufacturer — have not been enough to curb the pervasive problem. Dart sues deputy over domestic abuse claims

Sheriff alleges man, wife emailed falsehoods

BY GREGORY PRATT

Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart has sued one of his sheriff's deputies and the man's wife for allegedly emailing politicians, Chicago police investigators and journalists with false claims that Dart had attacked his wife last fall at their South Side home. Sheriff's deputy Howard Denham and his wife, Nicole, using the pseudonym "Dan Burley," used a Yahoo email address in spreading the false claims from her place of work, according to the lawsuit and Dart spokesman Dennis Culloton. The lawsuit also names her employer Paper Source Inc. as a defendant. A person's reputation can be ruined anonymously online in the current climate, Culloton said, and Dart is "taking a stand against anonymous attacks." "He feels this is a very important thing to do not just for him personally but for everyone who gets attacked in this fashion," Culloton said. Beginning last fall, rumors swirled for months about alleged domestic incidents in Dart's home, but Chicago police and

Judge rules murder trial can proceed

Man accused in 1994 death of Lisle woman fails in effort to have charge dismissed

By Clifford Ward
Chicago Tribune

The case against a man charged with murder in the 1994 death of a Lisle woman has not been unduly hampered by the passage of time and can proceed, a DuPage County judge ruled Friday. Judge George Bakalis denied a motion filed by Thomas Spear, who was seeking the dismissal of a first-degree murder charge filed against him last year in the death of Illa Venard, 71.

Authorities say Spear, a former

Peoria resident, broke into Venard's apartment on or about July 31, 1994, grabbed her by the neck and threw her to the floor when she confronted him. An autopsy did not pinpoint a cause of death, but prosecutors say she may have died from strangulation or suffered a fatal heart attack.

Spear, 44, who is being held in lieu of $3 million bail, was charged in October 2017 after Lisle police reopened the case.

At Friday's hearing, Bakalis ruled that the delay between the alleged crime and arrest had not created due process violations that would hamper Spear's defense. "I don't think the evidence I've heard can establish actual and substantial prejudice," Bakalis said.

The defense, which put two witnesses on the stand, argued that DNA evidence collected from Venard was not reliable and also said that it was difficult to find witnesses who could clearly remember events from more than 20 years ago. But Bakalis indicated that the DNA argument could be made at trial and noted there were in fact witnesses available to testify.

Authorities say Spear, disguised as a woman, cashed checks taken from Venard's apartment the day after she died, and that fingerprints taken from the checks match Spear's. At his bond hearing last year, prosecutors said Spear was friends with the victim's neighbor at the complex Lane where Venard lived, and that Spear had seen the widow around the pool, wearing a lot of jewelry. He allegedly mentioned to the friend that it would be easy to break into her apartment and steal things, prosecutors said.

In an interview with police after the case was reopened, Spear said that Venard had collapsed as he entered through her balcony sliding door, and that he tried to revive her, prosecutor Kritsin Johnston said at his bond hearing. Spear then said "the scumbag in him kicked in" and he ransacked the apartment for valuables, the prosecutor said.

Spear told police he moved a chair to partially cover Venard's body because he didn't want to look at the dead woman, prosecutors said.

The case will be back in court on Oct. 22 for a status hearing.

Priest: 'Love the sinner, hate the sin — that's as harsh as I get'

Rev. Paul Kalchik said he burned a rainbow banner that hung in Resurrection Catholic Church because God didn't want the symbol there

By Ese Olumhense
Chicago Tribune

The Rev. Paul Kalchik of Resurrection Catholic Church recently burned a rainbow banner that hung in the Avondale church because God didn't want the symbol there, he said Friday, responding to a controversy that's engulfed the parish since the banner-burning became public.

Kalchik spoke with the Tribune after another response to the controversy in the parish's Sunday bulletin for Sept. 23, titled "Responses from around the country, some bad, mostly good," was posted on the parish's website.

The unsigned letter also said the Archdiocese of Chicago has offered no "words of comfort" to Kalchik, who has faced withering criticism from some in the LGBT community for burning the banner after prayers of exorcism.

Ald. Deb Mell, 33rd, who held a small protest outside the church Wednesday, has demanded the pastor's ouster, deeming the act an anti-gay hate crime and

Kalchik a "hateful bigot."

He disagrees. "I'm about as much of a 'gay basher' as Mother Teresa of Calcutta," the 56-year-old said Friday. "Love the sinner, hate the sin — that's as harsh as I get."

Kalchik denies being a "hater" or homophobic. He said he has received some notes of support but many threats since it was revealed that he torched "that stupid flag."

Fearful of a retaliatory attack, Kalchik said he has had to have police escort him from the church to his home. On Monday, he said an intruder tried to break into the home to possibly attack him.

Police confirmed that they were dispatched to the 3000 block of North Francisco Avenue just before 9 p.m. on Monday because of a report of an open door. Officers did a sweep of the area, but no report was filed, according to police.

Kalchik said he twice was a victim of sexual abuse, the first time by a neighbor, when he was 11, and the second time by a Chicago-area priest when he was a teenager. The priest Kalchik names as the one who abused him died in the 1990s and has not been among those who have been named by the Diocese of Joliet or the Archdiocese of Chicago as a priest with substantiated allegations against them. Kalchik equates the flag with predatory behavior, he said.

The church bulletin further explains Kalchik's thinking.

"The banner surfaced just when the news of the gay predation of former Cardinal McCarrick broke, and was found by a priest who was a himself a victim of a similar predator," it read. "We cannot think this happened because God wanted the banner hung back up in our Church. The clandestine nature of the consensual homosexual sex going on among so many in the clergy allowed the intimidation of seminarians and rapes to be covered up also.

"If you don't like Fr. Paul for burning that banner, at least ask yourself what it represented to him as a victim," the letter added. It also published the first names of some of those who allegedly made threats, inviting the faithful to pray for the callers.

"Only divine intervention (a miracle) will get them to calm down enough to have a rational discussion," the note said.

It's not yet clear whether Kalchik will be disciplined by the Chicago Archdiocese for destroying the banner. Church leadership has not been in touch, he said, though he was advised not to burn the banner by the vicars for priests of the archdiocese earlier this month.

"They verbally threatened me," he said, describing that call, and the "canonical penalties" he said he was told would follow his plan.

A spokeswoman from the Archdiocese of Chicago declined to respond to Kalchik's remarks.

Cook Dems recommend 'no' on judge retention

Jurist has come under fire for alleged role in a wrongful conviction

By Gregory Pratt
Chicago Tribune

The Cook County Democratic Party took rare action against a judge who's been criticized for his alleged role in a wrongful conviction by recommending that voters cast a "no" vote for his retention on the bench this November.

Party officials voted Friday to recommend dozens of judges for retention but voted against recommending Matthew

Coghlan

Coghlan, who has come under scrutiny for his alleged role when he was a prosecutor in the wrongful convictions of Armando Serrano and Jose Montanez for a 1993 murder.

Coghlan's record as a judge also has been scrutinized by Injustice Watch, a nonprofit news organization.

Jacob Kaplan, the Cook County Democrats' executive director, said he believes it's the first time the party has ever recommended a "no" vote — at least in the past 40 years. He called it a "difficult but necessary decision to maintain the high integrity of the party's values and mission."

The case involving Serrano and Montanez was one of the factors party officials considered as they voted not to recommend Coghlan, Kaplan said. The party interviewed the judge, visited his courtroom and reviewed data and documents in making its determination, Kaplan said.

Attorney Jennifer Bonjean filed a lawsuit in spring 2017 seeking $60 million in damages for her client, Serrano, who was released in 2016 after more than two decades in prison when prosecutors dropped charges.

The lawsuit alleges that controversial Chicago police Detective Reynaldo Guevara, his colleagues and then-Assistant State's Attorneys Coghlan and John Dillon worked together to pressure a key witness into pinning a 1993 murder on Serrano. Montanez filed a similar lawsuit shortly after Serrano.

In court, Coghlan has denied allegations of misconduct. He did not immediately return a message left with his office seeking comment on the vote. His attorney also did not return a message seeking comment.

Bonjean called the county's vote a "step in the right direction to holding our judiciary accountable."

The Judicial Accountability Political Action Committee, which has been campaigning to #DumpCoghlan, hailed the party's action.

"This is a truly historic day for criminal justice reform and is an important step forward in righting past wrongs and building an equitable, just future," the group said in an emailed statement.

cooperate with the process and let the league do (its) job.”

Cubs President Theo Epstein said he was taken aback by the accusations, in which Reidy-Russell alleged emotional and physical abuse during their 2 1/2-year marriage.

“Surprised? Yes, certainly,” Epstein said. “Late last night, before I went to bed, I saw the post. I immediately reached out to (MLB’s) investigative body to ask if they could verify any of what was in the post because it was so disturbing.

“The commissioner and the league office told us they were considering placing Addison on administrative leave, which is an intermediate step built into the domestic violence policy. We concur that that was appropriate for the situation.”

Russell has denied all allegations of abuse and reiterated his denial Friday.

Reidy-Russell, whose marriage was dissolved officially in August in a Florida court, made the allegations in an post titled “You no longer have a secret, you have a story” but did not describe the exact nature of the abuse.

“The first time I was physically mistreated by my spouse, I was in shock,” Reidy-Russell wrote. “I couldn’t wrap my head around what just happened. ... Why did he get so angry? What did I do for him to want to put his hands on me?”

“Of course I forgave him & assumed it would never happen again. I just thought he had let his emotions get the best of him, he loves me and he’s sorry. I was deeply hurt that he could even be capable of this behavior towards me, I couldn’t understand how the man I was so in love with, the FATHER of my child, the man I married just a few months ago could show such aggression towards me.”

She wrote that one incident of abuse occurred with their then-infant son present. Reidy-Russell had moved back to her and Russell’s hometown of Pensacola, Fla., but said she returned to Chicago about a month later so the child could visit Russell.

“But, as I expected our visit was a nightmare, I swore to myself it would be the last time he’d lay his hands on me & it would be that last time I’d let my son be a witness to it,” she wrote.

Reidy-Russell also accused him of verbal abuse, estrangement and an April 2017 instance of infidelity in which “he blamed his behavior to me on being stressed about his job and the expectations he held on his shoulders.”

She said she wrote the post to give herself and other women a voice.

“It is not okay for anyone, whoever they may be or whatever title they may have in society to hurt anyone, in any shape or form. I hope my story empowers and inspires other women to stand up for themselves who are going through any type of domestic abuse.”

Efforts to reach Reidy-Russell and Russell for comment were unsuccessful, nor did their divorce attorneys make statements on their behalf when contacted.

Russell released a statement through the MLB Players Association saying, “These allegations are completely false. I made that clear to Major League Baseball last year and reiterated it to the Cubs today. I’m confident any full and fair investigation will fully exonerate me. The protection of my children is foremost in my mind so I will have no further comment.”

When asked about the news Friday before the Cubs-Sox game at Guaranteed Rate Field, Cubs first baseman Anthony Rizzo said it’s “unfortunate” that the investigation is still ongoing and added, “I don’t really know what’s going on.”

“It seems crazy, it has been over a year now,” Rizzo said. “Somebody’s not doing their investigative work very good, I don’t think. It’s tough.”

Friday at Guaranteed Rate, Epstein told reporters that he and Ricketts informed Russell of MLB’s decision to place him on administrative leave that morning. Per the joint MLB-union policy, the leave is not to be viewed or treated as a punishment and no discipline can be imposed while the matter is being investigated.

Administrative leave can last up to seven days, according to league-union policy, Epstein explained, and after that period the league can request an extension of up to another seven days.

Domestic abuse allegations surfaced in June 2017 when a person who had been identified as a close friend of Reidy-Russell accused Russell, via social media, of “mentally and physically abusing her.”

Russell called the claim “false and hurtful.”

Reidy-Russell filed for divorce two weeks after the friend’s abuse accusation but declined to cooperate with Major League Baseball.

In Reidy-Russell’s Wordpress post Thursday night, she wrote: “As time went on abusive behavior happened more often in arguments (more so when he was under the influence) & the verbal/emotional abuse grew to new levels. Friends would express their concerns with me but I would assure them that I was okay, he lost his temper & wasn’t himself.”

Sheriff sues over claims

sheriff’s officials said there was never a police response to Dart’s Mount Greenwood neighborhood house on the alleged dates. Chicago police have gone so far as to check GPS data to confirm officers did not go to Dart’s residence, a spokesman previously told the Tribune.

Dart filed legal papers in February seeking to unmask an anonymous emailer who spread the allegations. That successful effort led to Dart’s filing the lawsuit Thursday in Cook County Circuit Court in his personal capacity, not as sheriff, through attorney John F. Winters Jr.

Howard Denham is a deputy working at the county jail, Cara Smith, a sheriff’s office spokeswoman, said. He started working for Dart’s office in September 2013 and makes more than $65,403 a year, Smith said.

A disciplinary investigation into Denham has been initiated, Smith said. He will be reassigned but will continue receiving a paycheck, she said.

The Denhams could not be reached Friday for comment.

Dart’s lawsuit does not offer a possible motive or explanation as to why the couple may have made the allegations. Culloton said he could not say what the defendants’ issue was with Dart, but said it would all come out in court.

Dart’s lawsuit cites three emails the Denhams allegedly sent last October.

One email to media and public officials, sent Oct. 22, says Dart committed “double domestic battery incidents on his wife” and “physically attacked his wife at their Mount Greenwood home leaving visible injuries to her face and person,” according to the lawsuit. That email claimed there were two incidents — one on either Oct. 11 or 12, and another on Oct. 17. Multiple sheriff’s police and Chicago cops responded, according to the email quoted in the lawsuit, but “no media attention and hush hush.”

Another email, dated Oct. 24, added allegations that Dart was involved in an “extra-marital affair” and referenced Dart’s “domestic battery incidents against his wife in which she sustained physical injuries/black eye,” the lawsuit said.

On Oct. 29, Denham emailed again to say Dart “attacked his wife causing visible injuries to her face,” observed by Chicago police and sheriff’s officers, and claiming that there’s a police report, the lawsuit said.

That email claimed Dart is “involved in this cover up” of the activity and that his wife told cops that her husband had attacked her, according to the lawsuit.

All the allegations in the emails are false, Dart’s lawsuit said.

In addition to suing Howard Denham, the lawsuit said his wife, Nicole, also disseminated the emails using her employer’s internet provider. A Paper Source representative did not return messages seeking comment.

Dart, a lawyer and former state lawmaker, is running unopposed for re-election. Although he’s a proven vote-getter, he is unpopular with some of his jail guards, who are critical of his stances on criminal justice reform. Dart’s office also has had conflicts with jail guards over workers calling in sick en masse during major events such as the Super Bowl.

Dart’s discovery petition filed in February successfully asked a judge to order Yahoo to turn over the IP addresses and other identifying information from the email account used to send the messages.

Among the recipients of the October emails were

Dart

Denham

Cook County State’s Attorney Kim Foxx, County Board President Toni Preckwinkle, Chicago police, Cook County commissioners, the county inspector general, the Department of Justice and reporters at CBS, CNN and the Chicago Sun-Times.

Records show a complaint also was made to a Chicago police oversight agency in October alleging that police refused to act or take reports “in regards to an incident that occurred at Sheriff Tom Dart’s home that involved his wife and his girlfriend.”

The complaint to the Civilian Office of Police Accountability, which investigates police misconduct, was not cited in the lawsuit but previously obtained by the Tribune under an open records request.

Culloton said they were able to identify the defendants through the legal process that Dart’s attorney began back in February. It involved a judicial order that ordered Yahoo to “unmask” the identities of a few names used to spread the rumor, Culloton said.

Culloton would not go into details about Denham’s background or if Dart personally knows him, but said a number of the emails were sent from an email address at a Paper Source store where Nicole Denham apparently works. “She was allowed to use her workspace,” Culloton said.

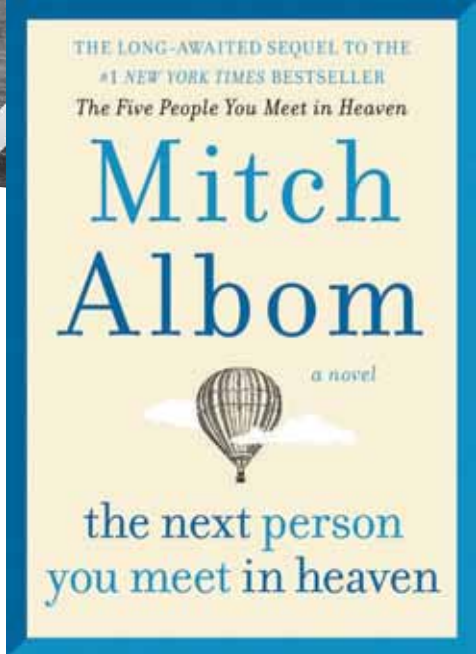

The lawsuit is seeking monetary damages against each of the defendants.

Culloton said Dart’s stance extends beyond himself and is aimed at anonymous online attacks that ruin reputations. “It’s awful,” Culloton said.

Panel nixes accuser's key requests

Ford's lawyer asks for another day to decide on testifying

BY ALAN FRAM AND CATHERINE LUCEY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Judiciary Committee chairman on Friday rejected key concessions sought by Brett Kavanaugh's accuser if she is to testify about her claim Kavanaugh sexually assaulted her when they were teenagers, and threatened a Monday vote by his panel on Kavanaugh's Supreme Court nomination without a quick agreement.

Minutes before a 10 p.m. deadline set by Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, an attorney for Christine Blasey Ford asked for another day to decide.

Lawyer Debra Katz said the time limit's "sole purpose is to bully Dr. Ford and deprive her of the ability to make a considered decision that has life-altering implications for her and her family."

The late-night brinkmanship left in question whether Ford, a California psychology professor, would appear before the GOP-run committee and tell lawmakers and a captivated nation about her allegation that an inebriated Kavanaugh trapped her on a bed, muffled her cries and tried removing her clothes when both were teenagers in the 1980s.

Grassley turned down Ford's request that only senators, not attorneys, be allowed to ask questions.

The committee's 11 Republicans — all men — have been seeking an outside female attorney to interrogate Ford, mindful of the election-season impression that could be left by men trying to pick apart a woman's assertion of a sexual attack.

He also rejected her proposal that she testify after Kavanaugh, a position lawyers consider advantageous because it gives them a chance to rebut accusations.

"We are unwilling to accommodate your unreasonable demands," Grassley said in a written statement.

Grassley's stance underscored a desire by President Donald Trump and GOP leaders to usher the 53-year-old Kavanaugh onto the high court by the Oct. 1 start of its new session and before the November elections, when Democrats are mounting a robust drive to grab congressional control.

Friday was the latest in a string of tumultuous days for Kavanaugh, whose ascension to the Supreme Court seemed a sure bet until Ford emerged last weekend and provided details of the alleged assault.

Kavanaugh, a District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals judge, has repeatedly denied the accusation.

Earlier, Trump ended a week of constraint and sarcastically assailed Ford, tweeting that if the episode was "as bad as she says," she or "her loving parents" surely would have reported it to law enforcement.

Trump's searing reproach of the California psychology professor defied the Senate Republican strategy, and the advice of White House aides, of not disparaging her while defending his nominee and the timetable for confirming him.

The president's tweet brought blistering rejoinders from Democrats and a mix of silence and sighs of regret from his own party.

Republican Sen. Susan Collins of Maine, who hasn't declared support for Kavanaugh, called the remark "appalling."

It was also the latest provocation — from a man who's faced a litany of sexual misconduct allegations himself — of moderate female voters whose support Republicans will need to fend off a robust Democratic drive to capture congressional control in November's elections.

At a campaign rally in Missouri later Friday, Trump didn't mention Ford but said Kavanaugh was born to be on the Supreme Court and "it's going to happen."

The Judiciary panel's top Democrat expressed fury at Grassley's negotiating position with Ford and maintained Democrats' effort to build the battle into an election-year issue about the treatment of women.

"Bullying a survivor of attempted rape in order to confirm a nominee — particularly at a time when she's receiving death threats — is an extreme abuse of power," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California.

Female interrogators "are sensitive to the particulars of Dr. Ford's allegations" and would "generate the most insightful testimony and will help depoliticize the hearing," said a letter Grassley's staff sent Ford's lawyers.

Grassley said he'd schedule a hearing for Wednesday, not Thursday, as Ford prefers.

"It is not fair to him or to his family to allow this situation to continue without a resolution and without an opportunity for him to clear his name," he said about Kavanaugh.

Grassley rebuffed other Ford requests, including calling additional witnesses. Ford wants an appearance by Mark Judge, a Kavanaugh friend who Ford asserts was at the high school party and in the bedroom where Kavanaugh's assault occurred. Ford eventually escaped.

Grassley consented to other Ford demands, including that she be provided security and that Kavanaugh not be in the hearing room when she testifies.

Ford's request for security comes after her lawyers said she has relocated her family due to death threats. She planned to meet with FBI agents in the San Francisco area to discuss those threats, said a person close to her who would describe her plans only anonymously.

The GOP letter to Ford's lawyers said Kavanaugh and his family also have received death threats.

Trump backs off order to declassify FBI files

Review underway after Justice Dept., allies raise concerns

BY JILL COLVIN AND ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump on Friday delayed his own order to declassify and release documents from the FBI's Russia investigation, saying the Justice Department and U.S. allies have raised security concerns about their disclosure.

The announcement, in a pair of tweets, represented a highly unusual walk-back for a president who has pressed for the release of classified information that he believes will expose "really bad things" at the FBI and discredit special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into possible coordination between Russia and the Trump campaign.

The order threatened to fuel further tension between Trump and a law enforcement community he routinely maligns as biased against him and determined to undermine his presidency.

The president on Monday had called for the declassification of highly sensitive records from the Russia probe, including a portion of a secret warrant application to monitor the communications of Carter Page, a Trump campaign adviser whom the FBI suspected of being a Russian agent.

The Justice Department said it had begun complying with the order, though officials had previously strenuously objected to the release of classified information they said could jeopardize the investigation and compromise secret sources.

On Friday, Trump said that instead of moving forward immediately, the department's inspector general had been asked to review these documents on an "expedited basis."

He tweeted that he believes the office, which is already reviewing FBI actions in the early stages of the Russia probe, will move quickly.

The president also noted: "In the end I can always declassify if it proves necessary. Speed is very important to me — and everyone!" Trump added.

Trump signaled a slowdown in an interview with Fox News on Thursday, when he said that several close allies had called to raise concerns about his decision to order the release of unredacted documents, which also include text messages of several FBI and Justice Department officials — including former FBI Director James Comey and ex-Deputy Director Andrew McCabe, both fired by the president — whom the president has for months personally attacked.

"And we do have to respect their wishes," he said in the interview. "But it'll come out."

On Friday, he said, Justice Department officials had warned him that the declassification of documents "may have a perceived negative impact on the Russia probe."

The White House did not respond to questions about why the president was now concerned about actions that "may have a perceived negative impact on the Russia probe."

Trump and his allies have spent months now trying to discredit the Russia probe and undermine its future findings.

Monday's order to declassify documents wasn't the first time that Trump had sought to publicize classified FBI records.

He made a similar move in February when the White House, over the objections of the FBI, cleared the way for the Republican-led House intelligence committee to release a partisan memo summarizing details from the Page warrant. Democrats later countered with their own memo.

A spokesman for the inspector general did not return a message seeking comment Friday.

Wisconsin workplace shooting suspect had revoked gun permit

BY TODD RICHMOND AND JAMES NORD
Associated Press

MIDDLETON, Wis. — The gunman in a Wisconsin workplace shooting was taken to a mental health hospital and barred from buying firearms 14 years ago after telling South Dakota police that his co-workers were "talking bad about him" and his neighbors were spying on him, according to court records.

WTS Paradigm employee Anthony Tong opened fire with a 9mm semi-automatic pistol inside the firm's Middleton headquarters Wednesday, seriously wounding three co-workers and grazing one.

Police rushed into the building and killed Tong in a shootout just minutes after the attack began.

Tong's motive remained a mystery Friday, and Police Chief Chuck Foulke cautioned against jumping to the conclusion it was a mental health issue.

WTS Paradigm said in a statement that he had been in good standing at the company.

It's also unclear how he acquired the pistol since he couldn't legally buy firearms. A search warrant unsealed Friday afternoon shows Tong had a cache of gun parts in his home, suggesting he may have built the pistol himself.

Foulke said federal authorities had trouble tracing the gun's origin, calling the weapon "unique."

Foulke filled in bits of the 43-year-old Tong's background, saying he moved

"It absolutely seems as though with some loophole he was able to get that firearm and he should not have been able to do that."

—Chuck Foulke, Middleton police chief from South Dakota to Madison in March 2017.

Tong had no criminal history but did have a run-in with police in South Dakota in 2004 that resulted in a judge revoking his concealed-carry permit over mental health questions.

The revocation would have red-flagged him on a gun background check, making it illegal for him to buy firearms, Foulke said.

"It absolutely seems as though with some loophole he was able to get that firearm and he should not have been able to do that," Foulke said.

According to South Dakota records, the manager of Tong's Sioux Falls apartment complex called police in August 2004 because the fire alarm had been disconnected in Tong's apartment. Tong told officers he had disabled the alarm.

Officers handcuffed him and found a .40-caliber pistol under his shirt.

Police: 5 stabbed — including newborns — at NYC nursery

NEW YORK — A woman stabbed five people — including three newborn babies — and then slashed her wrist early Friday inside a New York City home that was apparently being used as an unlicensed neighborhood nursery for new mothers and their children, authorities said.

All of the victims in the attack were hospitalized but expected to survive.

The 52-year-old suspect — an employee at the nursery — was taken into police custody and was being treated for her wounds and undergoing a psychiatric examination, authorities said.

Police responding to a 911 call discovered a 3-day-old girl and a 1-month-old girl who had been stabbed in the abdomen, and a 20-day-old girl with cuts on her ear, chin and lip. The father of one of the children and a woman who worked there were also stabbed.

PayPal is the latest platform to ditch Alex Jones, Infowars

SAN FRANCISCO — People won't be able to use PayPal anymore to buy fluoride-free toothpaste or a bottle of The Real Red Pill Plus from conspiracy promulgator Alex Jones.

The digital payments company is the latest platform to ditch Jones and his Infowars site, which along with conspiracy theories peddles "I Stand With Trump" T-shirts, Wake Up America coffee and dietary supplements.

PayPal said Friday it cut ties with Infowars after a review found instances of it promoting "hate and discriminatory intolerance against certain communities and religions."

Infowars said the move was aimed at sabotaging the site just weeks before the midterm elections. Twitter has banned Jones and Infowars; Facebook has also banned Infowars, while YouTube and Apple have limited Jones.

Japan space rovers lowered to asteroid to collect data

TOKYO — A Japanese spacecraft released two small rovers on an asteroid Friday in a mission that could provide clues to the origin of the solar system.

The Japan Space Exploration Agency said the two Minerva-II-1 rovers were lowered from the unmanned spacecraft Hayabusa2 to the asteroid Ryugu, about 170 million miles from Earth, in June.

The agency said confirmation of the robots' safe touchdown has to wait until it receives data from them on Saturday.

Hayabusa2 approached as close as 180 feet from the asteroid to lower the rovers.

The two rovers, which move by "hopping" because the asteroid's weak gravity makes rolling difficult, are to capture images of the surface and measure temperatures before a larger rover and a lander are released later.

Tanzania leader orders arrests as ferry death toll reaches 130

KAMPALA, Uganda — Hundreds of solemn people watched Friday as body after body was pulled from a capsized ferry that Tanzanian authorities said was badly overcrowded and upended in the final stretch before reaching shore. The death toll was above 130 but horrified witnesses feared that would rise as a second day of searching neared an end.

"This is a great disaster for our nation," President John Magufuli said. He announced four days of national mourning and urged calm in the East African country with a history of deadly maritime disasters. And he ordered arrests of all responsible as a criminal investigation began.

In a televised address, the president said the ferry captain already had been detained after leaving the steering to someone who wasn't properly trained, The Citizen newspaper reported.

The MV Nyerere's capacity was 101 people but the ferry had been overloaded when it capsized Thursday afternoon, authorities said.

At least 40 people had been rescued, he said, but the number on Friday barely rose. Dozens of security forces and volunteers wearing gloves and face masks had resumed work at daybreak after suspending efforts overnight.

It was obvious that more bodies were trapped in the overturned ferry, the president said, according to The Citizen report.

Tanzanian ferries often carry hundreds of passengers and are overcrowded, and shifts in weight as people move to disembark can become deadly. Images from the scene showed the ferry's exposed underside not far from shore.

Hotplates, heaters to be doled out after gas blasts

LAWRENCE, Mass. — Hotplates and space heaters will be distributed to thousands of Massachusetts residents who were left without natural gas following a series of gas explosions and fires, officials announced Friday.

The parent company of Columbia Gas, meanwhile, set a Nov. 19 deadline by which it expects to restore gas to all of the roughly 8,600 affected customers, with crews working to replace 48 miles of natural gas pipeline. The Sept. 13 disaster killed one person, injured about 25 others and damaged or destroyed dozens of homes and businesses in three communities.

Most residents of Lawrence, Andover and North Andover who were forced to flee their homes have been allowed to return, but thousands remain without natural gas service needed for cooking and to heat their homes.

Taiwan cops nab printable gun promoter on sex charge

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Authorities in Taiwan arrested the owner of a Texas company that sells plans to make untraceable 3D-printed guns who is wanted in the U.S. over an accusation that he had sex with an underage girl and paid her $500 afterward, official media reported.

The Central News Agency said Taiwanese police found and arrested Cody Wilson in a hotel in Taipei on Friday evening.

The Taiwanese news agency said the island's immigration department would make arrangements for Wilson to return to the U.S. as soon as possible.

Austin police Cmdr. Troy Officer said Wednesday that before Wilson flew to Taiwan, a friend of the 16-year-old girl had told him that police were investigating the accusation that he had sex with the youth last month at an Austin hotel.

In Australia: Tourists were warned to keep out of the water in the Whitsunday Islands on Australia's Great Barrier Reef after two swimmers were critically hurt in shark attacks on consecutive days. A 46-year-old woman was mauled Wednesday and a 12-year-old girl was attacked Thursday in Cid Harbor.

In Britain: A British fashion model has been sentenced to at least 25 years in prison for murdering a more successful rival during a fight over a love interest.

George Koh, 24, was convicted of stabbing Harry Uzoka, 25, through the heart in January after Koh challenged him to a fight.

Flooding prompts new warnings in Carolinas

More residents flee as waters continue to rise after storm

BY MEG KINNARD
AND JEFFREY COLLINS
Associated Press

GALIVANTS FERRY, S.C. — With muddy river water still washing over entire communities Friday, eight days after Hurricane Florence slammed into land with nearly 3 feet of rain, new evacuation orders forced residents to flee to higher ground amid a sprawling disaster that's beginning to feel like it will never end.

At least 42 people have died, included an elderly man whose body was found in a pickup that had been submerged in South Carolina, and hundreds were forced from their homes as rivers kept swelling higher and higher.

Leaders in the Carolinas warned residents not to get complacent as it became plain that additional horrors lie ahead before things get much better.

"Although the winds are gone and the rain is not falling, the water is still there and the worst is still to come," South Carolina Gov. Henry McMaster said. President Donald Trump, speaking in Las Vegas, said South Carolina is in for a "tough one" as flood waters continue to rise.

"They got hit, but the big hit comes days later and it will be the biggest they've ever had," said Trump, who visited North and South Carolina this week.

While most peoples' lights are back on in the Carolinas and Virginia and trucks are picking up mountains of storm debris in many areas, water draining toward the sea from inland areas is sending rivers over their banks across the region.

GERALD HERBERT/AP

Floodwaters overtake a pickup Friday in Nichols, S.C., after waters keep rising in the aftermath of Hurricane Florence.

Rescuers wearing night-vision goggles used helicopters, boats and big-wheeled military vehicles overnight to evacuate about 100 people from a southeastern North Carolina county where high water breached a levee and flooded a town.

And in South Carolina, emergency managers ordered about 500 people to flee homes along the Lynches River. The National Weather Service said the river could reach record flood levels late Saturday or early Sunday. Shelters are open.

In tiny Galivants Ferry, Audra Mauer said she lost her home two years ago when Hurricane Matthew hit and she's losing it again to Florence. No improvements were made to the area after Matthew, she said, and a frustrated Mauer has no faith any will happen now.

"They didn't clean the ditches," she said. "Same levee. Same dams. What have we been doing for two years? Where did the money go to fix everything, to make the power lines stronger and to replace the poles?"

About 25 miles nearer to the South Carolina coast, Kevin Tovornik was tearing soggy carpet out of the house he has owned for 20 years in Conway, where the Waccamaw River was still rising. Bridges are starting to close because of flooding, he said, and friends were stuck in traffic for four hours trying to get through the town of 23,000 people.

"This is ridiculous. This is the worst I've ever seen, and that includes hurricane evacuations," Tovornik said.

Roads also were a major problem in Wilmington, a city of 120,000 people still mostly cut off from the rest of North Carolina. A photograph posted by the state transportation agency showed flowing water and buckled asphalt on a highway that had been one of the few passable routes into the city, where officials have distributed food and water to residents.

Along the Cape Fear River, David and Benetta White and their four children were given short notice to evacuate overnight when floodwaters came rushing on to their property. By the time they got loaded into their van, water was waist-high as they made their way to a neighbor's pickup.

"We almost lost our lives, I'm here to tell you we did," said White, whose family previously evacuated last Thursday as Florence approached as a hurricane from the Atlantic.

Aldi recalls ground beef

11-state action tied to possible E. coli contamination

BY ROBERT CHANNICK
Chicago Tribune

Aldi is recalling ground beef sold in Illinois and other states due to possible E. coli contamination through a Colorado beef processing facility.

The meat, which has a use or freeze by date of July 10, was sold by Aldi as 80 percent lean fresh ground beef in 2-pound packages and four-count, one-third-pound patties. The product includes the stamp “EST.85M” inside the U.S. Department of Agriculture inspection mark, the company said.

Aldi, whose U.S. headquarters are in Batavia, sold the affected product at stores in 11 states, including Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. It also was sold to Aldi customers in the Chicago area through a partnership with grocery delivery service Instacart, the company said.

The beef was produced at Cargill Meat Solutions in Fort Morgan, Colo., which issued a national recall Wednesday of 132,600 pounds of ground chuck after an E. coli outbreak killed one person and sickened 17.

Aldi issued the voluntary

KRISTEN NORMAN/FOR THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE 2012

The meat, with a July 10 use or freeze by date, was sold as 80% lean fresh ground beef in patties and 2-pound packs.

recall “out of an abundance of caution,” according to a statement emailed to the Tribune. The discount grocery chain posted the recall notice on its website Friday afternoon.

“We take the safety and integrity of the products we sell very seriously,” the company said.

Aldi operates more than 1,800 U.S. stores in 35 states.

Chicago-area grocery chains Mariano’s and Jewel-Osco were not affected by the Cargill recall, the companies said Thursday.

The USDA said the ground chuck was produced and packaged June 21 and shipped to retail locations nationwide.

On Aug. 16, the USDA’s Food Safety and Inspection Service determined that raw ground beef produced at Cargill’s facility was the probable source of an E. coli outbreak that sickened 18 people, mostly in Florida, with illness onset dates ranging from July 5 to 25.

Most people infected with E. coli develop diarrhea and vomiting and generally recover in a week. In some cases, a severe infection can lead to kidney failure.

Cargill has identified the 3-, 10- and 20-pound chubs sent to distributors before being repackaged for sale at grocery stores, but the USDA has yet to post the retail distribution list on its website.

“This product was produced in June, and so none of this product would be on store shelves right now for any consumers to purchase,” April Nelson, a Cargill spokeswoman, said Thursday.

“They can feel confident going into a store and buying ground chuck,”

Since the affected beef expired in July, the primary concern is that some of the product may be tucked away in freezers.

“If you have the affected product in your home, please discard it immediately or return it to your local store for a full refund,” Aldi said.

N.Y. fund joins call for better poultry care

Pension group with stock holdings prods McDonald’s

BY DEENA SHANKER
Bloomberg News

McDonald’s has long been on the receiving end of calls to take better care of its chickens. Earlier this month, actors and musicians including Kristen Bell, Joan Jett and Weird Al Yankovic lent their names to demands for more humane treatment.

Now there’s a new name on that list, and it carries a lot more weight. In a letter dated Aug. 22 obtained by Bloomberg News, New York State Comptroller Thomas P. DiNapoli expressed concerns over the “potential financial and reputational risks associated with McDonald’s chicken welfare practices.”

DiNapoli was writing in his capacity as trustee of the New York State Common Retirement Fund, the third-largest public pension fund in the U.S. and — as of July 31 — holder of more than $300 million in McDonald’s stock.

The warning, addressed to McDonald’s Chairman Enrique Hernandez Jr. and CEO Stephen Easterbrook, follows a media campaign by the Humane Society of the United States, including a TV ad running in McDonald’s hometown of Chicago and a letter with 20 celebrity signatories. They all urge the restaurant giant to follow competitors such as Burger King and Subway in making “modest reforms” to its chicken welfare policies, including transitioning to more humane breeds and slaughter practices.

While McDonald’s, the nation’s largest restaurant chain, has committed to cage-free eggs by 2025 and gestation crate-free pork by 2022, it has yet to join competitors in promising these specific steps for chickens, the most populous animal on U.S. farms.

DiNapoli called on the company to adopt precise standards for broiler chicken welfare, like those provided by the Royal Society of Cruelty to Animals or the Global Animal Partnership.

The point, though, isn’t just to take better care of animals, he said. It’s to protect the company, and thus its investors — including big institutional ones like New York.

“Although these standards are important from an animal welfare perspective,” the letter states, “they also make business sense.” DiNapoli cited both increased consumer demand for higher welfare animal products, and the negative publicity McDonald’s has garnered by lagging behind.

He concluded his letter with a request for “a response detailing what the company is doing to build on its recent chicken welfare policy and align it with widely accepted best practices like RSPCA and GAP.”

The Humane Society’s complaints about McDonald’s treatment of chickens focus on crowded housing as well as the breed, which is chosen for its fast growth but prone to health problems including broken legs.

The group applauded DiNapoli’s letter. “That McDonald’s is allowing chickens to gravely suffer in its supply chain while its competitors take steps to improve their treatment certainly should cause concern for anyone invested in the company,” said Josh Balk, vice president of the Humane Society’s farm animal protection.

“We’re glad the state of New York recognizes this and is taking steps to protect its investment by urging McDonald’s to do better.”

DiNapoli spokesman Matthew Sweeney said that they have yet to get a response from McDonald’s. In response to a request for comment by Bloomberg News, the fast-food chain didn’t directly answer DiNapoli’s request for an accounting — or say whether it would address the Humane Society’s concerns.

“Last October we announced a new policy establishing eight global commitments which will measurably improve chicken welfare across our supply chain,” the company said. These include “requiring chickens be raised in housing environments that promote natural behaviors, implementing on-farm monitoring systems to gather key welfare indicators, establishing third party audits, and the creation of an independent Global Chicken Sustainability Advisory Council.”

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Unfulfilled promises

OK, I confess. I am infected with Trump Derangement Syndrome. But I don't consider it an affliction that needs a cure. This condition is brought on by the most reckless, irresponsible, self-serving behavior this country has ever witnessed by a chief executive, and my inability to ignore it is not a sign of illness.

Supporters of the current administration will tout the economy, the tax cuts, the swaggering diplomatic dismantling as signs of success. And they will ignore the unfulfilled campaign promises to "drain the swamp" and other such wild exaggerations. In their place, we witness unspeakable damage being done to government debt, to long-term taxpayer burdens, and to our country's status on the world stage. The president's appointments of foxes to guard the henhouses of education, the environment, the monetary system, health care, housing, civil rights and justice do not equate to draining the swamp. Appointing and hiring incompetents and crooks, many of whom are either already gone or indicted, is not draining the swamp.

I wonder — how many readers have seen a raise since the tax cut that was supposed to stimulate wage increases? Remember — that tax cut is temporary for you wage-earners, while it's permanent for corporations. How many have seen reductions in their prescription drug costs? In health insurance premiums? How many realize our national debt has increased since Trump took office? That our national trade deficit has increased in spite of the emerging tariff war? That the key Supreme Court nominee currently under consideration has written a legal opinion that the chief executive should be immune from criminal investigations or indictments while in office?

Meanwhile, corporations have been buying back their own stock, making themselves less accountable to public shareholders. What this means is that the "captains of industry" wield ever more power and their political influence is gradually eclipsing that of the general population. In other words, our democracy is shifting toward becoming an oligarchy, where power is held by a small cluster of extremely wealthy people. One only needs to look at the current administration's Cabinet appointments to see this playing out.

We must remember that America has always been great. We survived the Great Recession of only a decade ago, and we brought the rest of the world along with us. America is already great. It is imperative that we safeguard our democracy, and that means taking the surest action available to us to stop the current dismantling of the gains we have so dearly paid for over the last two centuries — go to the polls in November!

— Jim Renshaw, Carbondale

Altruistic concern

Although my wife and I moved away almost a dozen years or so ago, we remain very interested in things in our longtime home of Cook County, especially because so many friends and family members reside there. Because of our location, we, too, are bombarded with advertisements from the two candidates for Illinois governor. I can tell you that according to these advertisements, neither candidate is a saint. Both candidates are quite wealthy. They are both concerned with the fiscal situation and challenges facing the state. We decided that seeing either the same advertisements or anticipating new ones, these facts are not likely to change.

As a result, we would like to recommend the following: Maybe both candidates could reduce their advertising budgets by at least 50 percent, if not more, and give the remaining amount to the comptroller's office. Those hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of dollars would do more to assist Illinois by reducing its backlog of unpaid bills than by feeding the pockets of ad agencies and broadcasters. This would demonstrate symbolically that these two people really do have an altruistic concern for improving Illinois and are willing to put some of their assets directly into making definitive progress. We believe that we are in a good position to make this kind of recommendation because we have nothing to gain personally.

We are at a time when those who seek the power of an elected office need to do a bit more than use their personal fortunes to make names for themselves. People are hungry for leadership. People are skeptical of those who seek political prominence because they can. We can only wonder if either one of these candidates can be the first to demonstrate that he really wants the best for those he "serves" and that he is truly thinking about what is best for the greatest number of citizens during this job interview period.

Build the wall

It's no secret that I was one of those people in the last election who voted against the person who wants to build a wall on our southern border. Why? Well, for one thing, walls don't work. Just ask China, which has offered to sell us its slightly used one for only a dollar. (All we do is pay for shipping and handling!)

Another thing is that walls send a not-too-subtle message. Build a 6-foot fence on your lot line, and it's a sure thing your neighbors won't be having you over for Christmas dinner.

And finally, unless you're completely wrapped up in your own world, immigrants from Central and South America do much of the manual labor in this country. Agriculture, food service, construction and landscaping are just a few of the areas that depend on migrant labor. Know any neighborhood kids who want to pick tomatoes?

However, I've changed my mind. I was wrong. Big time. Now I want a wall. A great big, mean, spike-laden wall. A nasty barrier with laser spikes ready to zap the first challenger. And how about adding some alligators in a moat?

Why the about-face on building this barrier? Well, I've come to realize that, like most Americans, it isn't the wall I object to; it's the location. Instead of building a wall on the Mexican border, we really need a wall around Washington. The sooner, the better!

Not only will building a wall around our capital be more practical, but everyone in our country will benefit from it. That means Republicans, Democrats and independents. I'd even guess that both of our bordering neighbors would be willing to chip in some dough for the cost. And, with the money we'll save on construction, we might even put a roof on it (air holes will be optional and up to the voters).

Oh, yes, just one final request on the new wall: Make it soundproof!

The Cubs are in a pennant race and need every advantage, but don't look for infielder Addison Russell to contribute during this weekend's crosstown series with the White Sox. Russell was put on administrative leave Friday by Major League Baseball after he was accused of domestic violence.

The allegations come from Melisa Reidy-Russell, the ballplayer's former wife, who posted a detailed account of their relationship on a blog linked to her Instagram account. The physical and emotional abuse she alleges is chilling: a cycle of mistreatment that she says left her fearful, isolated and broken.

"Emotional/verbal abuse started way before I even realized," she wrote. "Being blamed for just about anything that went wrong, name calling, intimidating me with personal force, manipulating me to think I was the problem, destroying my personal things, threatening me to 'send' me & our son home to my parents as I if I was privileged to be living in our home. Basically, I felt like I was nothing."

Reidy-Russell didn't go into the specifics of any incidents, and Russell certainly shouldn't be prejudged. As in any situation where someone is accused of possible wrongdoing, he's innocent until proved otherwise. But the allegations are serious and Russell, as a professional athlete, is a public figure who should be held to a high standard of behavior. It would be inappropriate for him to take the field and have his name announced to the crowd as if a domestic violence accusation were less important than his batting and fielding averages.

Baseball appears to understand its obligation. MLB has had a domestic violence policy since 2015. An accused player can be put on paid leave for up to a week while the claims are investigated. That suspension can be extended for a second week. Then baseball's commissioner can decide whether to issue a suspension.

Russell faced abuse allegations last year via social media, a claim he denied. On Friday, in response to Reidy-Russell's blog post, the Cubs said Russell told the team that "he did not do what he is accused of."

None of us on the outside can reach conclusions about such allegations and denials. But a word is in order about Reidy-Russell's decision to go public. Her account, titled "you no longer have a secret, you have a story," provides a window on the encompassing distress of a volatile marriage. "Our relationship came to a point where there were days he'd come home from work and he wouldn't even acknowledge my existence, which was so much more hurtful to me than being cussed out or yelled at," she wrote.

It's a deeply personal reflection that contains a message for others: Finding "the courage to stand up for yourself," she wrote, is hard for someone in an abusive relationship who feels stripped of "self-worth & self-respect."

As for Russell's immediate future, Cubs fans will have to wait. Any player determined to have violated baseball's policy on domestic violence and sexual assault should face punishment. If that means missing playoff games, baseball will be doing the right thing.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING

From 1996 to 1997, four women filed sexual-harassment or discrimination suits against Bloomberg the company. One of the suits included the following allegation: When Sekiko Sakai Garrison, a sales representative at the company, told Mike Bloomberg she was pregnant, he replied, "Kill it!" (Bloomberg went on, she alleged, to mutter, "Great, No. 16" — a reference, her complaint said, to the 16 women at the company who were then pregnant.) To these allegations, Garrison added another one: Even prior to her pregnancy, she claimed, Bloomberg had antagonized her by making disparaging comments about her appearance and sexual desirability. "What, is the guy dumb and blind?" he is alleged to have said upon seeing her wearing an engagement ring. "What the hell is he marrying you for?" Bloomberg denied having made those comments, claiming that he passed a lie-detector test validating the denial but declining to release the results.

Megan Garber, The Atlantic

Donald Trump's "America First" is a pithier version of Barack Obama's call to focus on "nation-building at home," and the policies of the two administrations have more in common than either would like to admit. ... The European peace established since the Cold War is less than three decades old. Prior to World War II, wars in Europe were brought on by a combination of growing nationalism, collapsing democracies and global instability, all of which are visible today. Those who oppose the American promotion of democracy abroad generally have non-Western nations in mind, but let's not have too much faith in the West. Few of Europe's democracies date back before World War II. It was in the West that fascism and communism arose, and it is in the West that democracy is at risk once again.

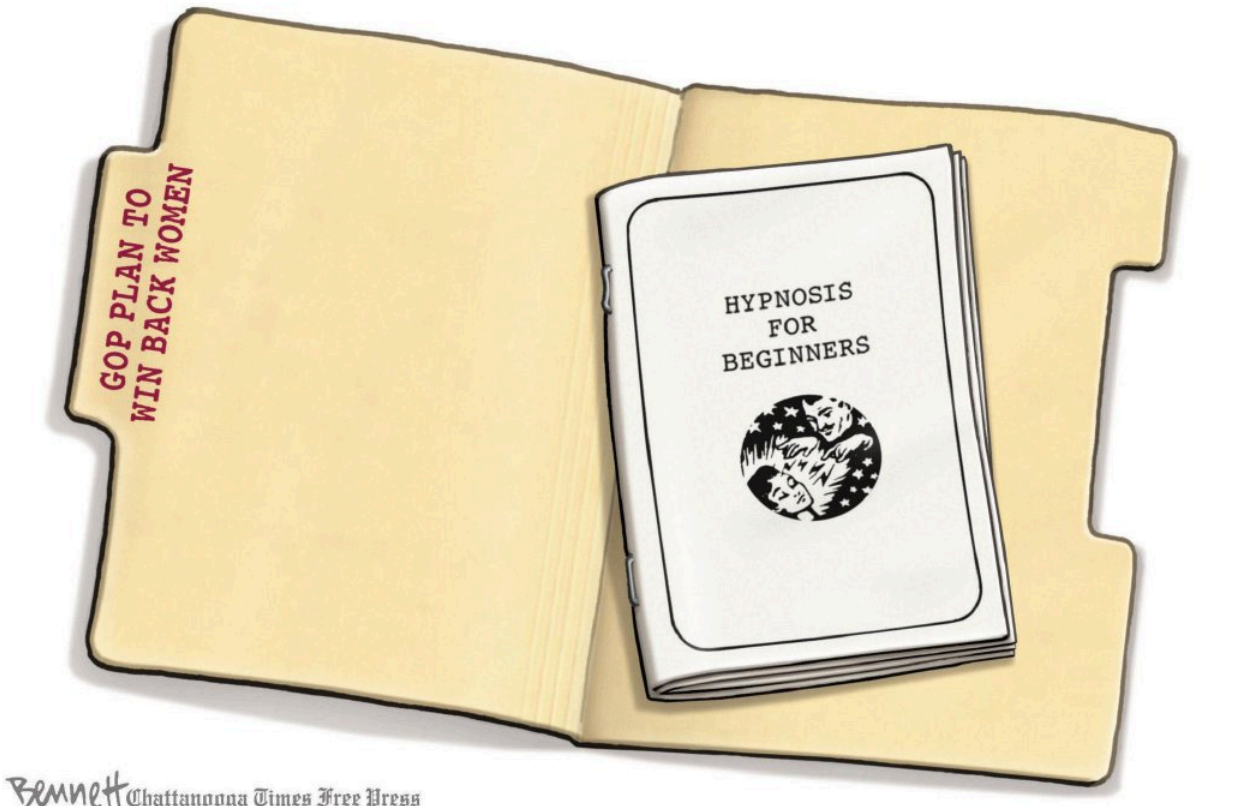

The emerging consensus today is that the U.S. has been doing too much. But what if we have been doing too little? We wanted to believe that the course of history was taking us away from the war, tyranny and destruction of the first half of the 20th century, but it may be taking us back toward them, absent some prodigious effort on our part to prevent such regression.

Robert Kagan,
The Wall Street Journal

Several of the regional Federal Reserve banks conduct surveys of business conditions in their districts that also ask about plans for investment. The results from the New York district, the Philadelphia district and the Chicago district all tell pretty much the same story. Investment is expanding at a moderate pace along with the overall economy, but there is zero evidence anywhere of an investment boom induced by the tax cut. The tax cut proponents will undoubtedly object that it is too early to make much of the data we have, but remember, their claim was the tax cut would lead to a huge surge in investment, implying that businesses are very responsive to changes in the tax rate. ... And without this growth in investment, the corporate tax cuts look like just another way to give money to the richest people in the country who own most of the stock in the corporations getting the tax cuts.

Riccardo Muti, below, leads the CSO and Civic Orchestra of Chicago in Verdi's "The Four Seasons" at Pritzker Pavilion on Thursday.

IN PERFORMANCE

A rousing joint effort

BY HOWARD REICH
Chicago Tribune

Chicagoans justly take pride in the virtuosity of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the prodigiousness of its training ensemble, the Civic Orchestra of Chicago.

But until Thursday evening, the full personnel of both organizations never had shared a stage (though members of the CSO periodically have collaborated with their younger colleagues).

So CSO music director Riccardo Muti made some musical history at Pritzker Pavilion in Millennium Park, an estimated 10,000-plus people crowding the place to hear two mighty ensembles play as one.

They did so in a program that was as much civic event as artistic statement, listeners convening for Muti's annual "Concert for Chicago," a free-admission affair that gave everyone access to music-making at the highest level. That the CSO was launching its 128th season and the Civic celebrating its 100th deepened the significance of the occasion.

The program marked the ninth time Muti has presided over such a community concert since the start of his tenure, in 2010, and the fifth time in Millennium Park.

The maestro appeared to revel in the moment, speaking to the audience early on to explain what this program meant to him.

All three compositions would deal with "freedom, liberta, liberty," he said, briefly invoking his native Italian. But even apart from the underlying theme of works by Rossini, Verdi and Tchaikovsky, there was no mistaking the impact of hearing nearly 150 musicians responding ardently to Muti's direction.

The opening drum roll signaled that "The Star-Spangled Banner" would be first, but here, too, Muti sought to make contact with listeners. After leading the orchestra in the first several bars of the national anthem — which aren't easy for anyone to sing — he turned around to conduct the audience, waving his baton for quite a while. Nice touch.

Just about everyone knows Rossini's Overture to "William Tell," whether they realize it or not, its most rousing motif made famous (or perhaps trivialized) by the old TV show "The Lone Ranger." In his opening comments, Muti pointed out that Rossini's message ran deeper than that of the masked rider, the opera addressing Austria's historic occupation of Switzerland (hence the reference to freedom).

CSO principal cellist John Sharp brought characteristic warmth and plushness of tone to the first pages, an enormous orchestral contingent soon providing exactly the big-and-brawny support one expected. Similarly, orchestral brass announced the heroic theme brilliantly but unhurriedly, Muti conjuring excitement without bombast.

"The Four Seasons" ballet music that Verdi composed for the opera "I Vespri Siciliani" (about a Sicilian rebellion against French occupation) offered a lyrical counterbalance to "William Tell." But it was something more than that, as well. For these pieces unfold as richly evocative, finely etched tone poems in which colors, textures and atmosphere are constantly in flux.

So though the spirit of the dance imbues all four movements, the work's shadings of tone and balance of orchestral sonorities tell the story. Muti offered a painterly approach, which included a poetic solo from the orchestra's new principal oboe, William Welter, playing his first CSO concert in that role.

Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," which chronicles Russian battles against the occupying French, offers opportunity for overstatement, which Muti and colleagues resisted. In some passages, the conductor hardly moved, as if encouraging restraint. So what stood out most was clarity of corporate sound, every line ringing out, no matter how thick the orchestration became.

Of course, the sonic orgy that concludes the piece could not be denied, but even here, detail prevailed over decibels.

Quite a start to the season for two essential Chicago musical institutions.

IN PERFORMANCE 'Curve of Departure' ★★★

Space is tight, but drama oozes heart

BY CHRIS JONES
Chicago Tribune

One fundamental problem faced by America's oldest Equity actor — that would be the 94-year-old Mike Nussbaum — is that directors keep casting him in age-appropriate roles. Such is his vitality, he can be hard to believe in them.

In the case of Rachel Bonds' "Curve of Departure," a beautifully written little play in need of a more expansive narrative and structural ambition, Nussbaum plays Rudy, an elderly and depressed New Yorker who has developed a late-in-life taste for tabloid TV, and who worries both about his own declining mental health and his ability to exit on his own terms from what has become a pretty miserable life.

In this 75-minute family drama, Nussbaum's Rudy finds himself in a New Mexico hotel room, on the eve of the funeral of a son he did not much like, and who he is convinced he failed. He's sharing a room with his daughter-in-law Linda (Penelope Walker), his grandson Felix (Sean Parris), and Felix's partner Jackson (Danny Martinez). Aside from everyone dealing with their feelings for and about the recently deceased, "Curve of Departure" also is about how our families are often collections of diverse and disparate folks, all of whom are trying their best to overcome challenges that their own loved ones struggle to understand.

When: Through Oct. 21

And nights before funerals are when all of that tends to come to the fore. Especially when everyone is sharing the same room.

BJ Jones' Northlight Theatre production — the first for this work in Chicago — could have used a set that evoked more of the tension (tension of which I have personal experience) when extended families try to cram themselves into two doubles and one sofa bed. Lauren Nigri has come up with a pretty huge room, dissipating much of that, and the patio where the action eventually moves is more like a public square than what motels attracting lower-middle-class families generally afford. What is missing here is a sense of true confinement, which is what Bonds clearly wants to write about here.

When we're on top of each other, we tend to behave differently; this is not a play in need of a lot of space. On the contrary.

Many of the performances are very touching — Parris, for example, works with a rich subtext, expressing in many lovely ways the things that his character does not get to say. The play is only 75 minutes, so much goes unsaid, contributing to my sense of this piece as a rich and poignant character study, a frequently profound observation of life as it is lived by ordinary Americans, people who are rewriting some of the rules without the language to articulate their own radicalism.

But you become so interested in them, you crave a lot more interaction in real time; this is a heartfelt play with a beautiful facility for language that does not have enough of its own raw material. It needs to risk more, if it's to fully honor its characters.

All that said, your brief and uneven stay at Northlight ends with a truly exquisite scene between Nussbaum's Rudy and Walker's Linda. It's one of those interchanges you'll know from your own life, where people come to terms with life's imperfections and take solace in love, a sense of humor and our ongoing presence above the ground rather than buried therein. Nussbaum finally gets to explode Rudy with the spirit of life, the fundamental need to crush all depressive feelings, the vital importance of living positively in the moment, however old you may be.

All around me, people started making noises of recognition. That means a lot more than applause.

"Little Shop of Horrors" is the spoof 1982 off-Broadway musical by Alan Menken and Howard Ashman, based on a B-movie shocker about a young florist named Seymour and the Faustian bargain he strikes with a carnivorous plant. It's a gem of its kind. And at the Drury Lane Theatre, the phenomenal Kelly Felthous is playing Audrey. I've heard a lot of people do "Somewhere That's Green" in my time, but I think Felthous sings it better than I've ever heard. Shires brings conviction, elegance to Thalia Hall

By Bob Gendron
Chicago Tribune

Amanda Shires made nearly every song she performed Thursday at Thalia Hall sound autobiographical. Whether the works concerned her, people she knew or fictional beings seemed irrelevant. What mattered was the assured, steadfast manner in which she conveyed the music's emotions with personal conviction — feats that indicated the singer-songwriter belongs in elite company.

Primarily known for her role as violinist in her husband Jason Isbell's band, Shires is in the midst of a stretch in which she's proving her worth as a headliner. A former member of the Texas Playboys, the 36-year-old began releasing solo records more than a decade ago. But her artistic growth really began to blossom in 2016 after she collaborated on "My Piece of Land" with of-the-moment producer Dave Cobb. The duo teamed up again on the recent "To the Sunset," an adventurous album that strips any Americana tags still attached to her.

Backed by a solid five-piece group, Shires showcased her penchant for diversity during a 90-minute concert equally notable for its stylistic palette and lyrical thrift. Possessing a master's degree in poetry, the Texas native took a less-is-more approach to storytelling, relying on specific details and insightful metaphors to transform brief sentences into entire scenes. She used images, geographies, colors and noises as literary devices to navigate unexpected situations and attempt to find certainty in a world filled with apprehension.

Shires' vocal deliveries mirrored the revealing nature of her narratives.

MARK ZALESKI/AP

Amanda Shires showcases her skills during the Americana Honors and Awards show Sept. 12 in Nashville, Tenn.

She often sang with understated elegance and whisperlike softness, crossing cautious vulnerability with healthy curiosity on low-key fare such as the contemplative "White Feather." Yet, when required, she quickly turned in the way a calm sky cedes to a tempest, her warm phrasing giving way to smooth albeit powerhouse expressiveness that defied anyone to stand in her way.

With Shires belting out the words, the insides-aching loneliness of "When You're Gone" and starting-over burdens chronicled on the rollicking "Eve's Daughter" came across not as self-pitying hardships but as the determined-to-triumph outpourings of a woman unafraid to profess her desires and assert control. Shires' boldness, which extended to her onstage movements and playful interaction with the band, felt especially relevant during a #MeToo era that has seen most Nashville-based artists remain on the fringes of the conversation.

Ironically, Shires' only serious shortcoming related to speaking. Her banter suffered from long pauses and awkward transitions. At one point, she admitted to reminding herself not to talk. It served as sage advice. Shires and company needn't waste time with idle chatter when rewarding excursions into star-gazing soul ("Parking Lot Pirouette"), West Texas-flavored psychedelia ("Look Like a Bird") and twang-scorched surf-rock ("Shake the Walls") beckoned.

As did two covers that illustrated Shires' dynamic spectrum. Her group laid into the Beatles' "I Want You (She's So Heavy)" with swinging gusto of a jazz band. Better still, she treated Jason Molina's "Just Be Simple" as a gospel elegy — and the words of the song's title as a mission statement.

Ex should also become ex-tenant

Dear Amy: About six months ago my boyfriend, "Gabe," and I broke up after I found out he had been meeting up with other women without telling me. However, we had recently renewed our leasing agreement, so I agreed to move in with my brother and let Gabe stay at the apartment until the lease expired.

Because of this, we have been in constant contact since the split. We are mainly amicable. I made it clear to him that I would be willing to work on our relationship, if he was too.

Fast-forward to now. I just found out that Gabe has had a new girlfriend for the last two months. She's been living in our old place with him, and he's been lying about it the whole time. I will sometimes assist him with bills and rent if he doesn't have enough, so this was infuriating.

Now he tells me that he isn't really into her and allows her to stay there still only so she can help with the bills. He kisses me every time he sees me, tells me he loves me and misses me, etc.

I'm getting mixed signals, and I'm stuck at that place where I don't know if I should wait to see how it pans out or if I should move on. Is he keeping me around in case things don't work out with her? Should I stay or should I go?

— Unsure

Dear Unsure: You sound like a fairly smart person. So ... what about life with "Gabe" is so confusing to you? His behavior is consistent: He hooks up with women because he feels like it and because they help him pay the bills. Then he bounces back to you because you are his backup plan.

Let's recap: You are co-leasing this apartment but not living there. Evidently you have the resources to not only relinquish your apartment to him, but to also give him money. All Gabe has to do is to kiss you now and then, and continue to lie to you. Are you really so easy? I hope not.

But, to answer your direct question, I do NOT think you should go. HE should!

However, understanding that you probably won't be able to get him out of this apartment, you should contact the landlord, ask for a lease modification, and make every effort to get your name off the lease. Not being tethered to him should help you to move on, because you won't have any reason to be in touch.

Dear Amy: A good friend of mine has been married for years to a jerk. She acknowledges that he is emotionally abusive and controlling but has decided to stay with him because she recognizes that she would have a hard time on her own.

She complains endlessly about how terrible he is but then gets upset when her friends don't want to spend time with him. She can socialize without him, but she insists on bringing him to larger events and gets upset when some of us indicate that we'd rather not include him.

In addition to the awful way he treats her, he is also obnoxious. She feels like we should at least act like we are friends with him, too, because otherwise she is being punished twice (by him and by us).

I understand that it is rude not to include a spouse in social activities, especially when other spouses are invited, but I hate having to act friendly and pretend that I don't know what an awful person he is.

Is it OK to occasionally ask her to attend events alone, even when other spouses are invited, and if not, what is the best way to navigate this?

— Flummoxed Friend

Dear Flummoxed: If you know in advance that a behavior you're contemplating is rude, then your choices are to either be rude with abandon — and own it — or to simply not be rude, and include this husband when others' spouses are also included.

Your friend already knows how you feel about her husband. Perhaps if he offends you at a gathering, instead of communicating about him through her, you could (privately) call him out on his obnoxious behavior.

Dear Amy: "Frustrated Granddaughter" described how her grandparents had moved across the country and are now pressuring family members to visit!

This is the sort of thing elders should think about before making a huge move, don't you think?

— Slapping my Forehead

Dear Slapping: Yes, I do.

WATCH THIS: SATURDAY

Sally Hawkins

“The Shape of Water” (7 p.m., 1:55 a.m., HBO): Sally Hawkins got an Oscar nod for playing a mute custodian at a government facility who falls in love with an amphibious humanoid creature (Doug Jones) who has been brought in for study. Michael Shannon, Richard Jenkins, Michael Stuhlbarg and Octavia Spencer also star.

“Unspeakable Crime: The Killing of Jessica Chambers” (6 p.m., 8 p.m., 1 a.m., OXY): Acclaimed filmmaker Joe Berlinger’s true-crime miniseries, which looks back at the ghastly 2014 murder of a small-town Mississippi teenager and the racially charged murder trial that followed, continues with the new episode “A Dying Declaration,” which takes its title from testimony by emergency medical technicians who rendered care to the victim in her last moments.

“Planet Earth: Yellowstone” (8 p.m., 11 p.m., BBCA): As winter snow recedes, the lush and diverse glories of Yellowstone National Park are fully revealed as the region moves into “Summer,” the second of three episodes. Herds of elk, pronghorn antelope and bison emerge from their winter turf in the surrounding lowlands to avail themselves of America’s richest natural grasslands. Elsewhere, groggy grizzly bears come out of hibernation.

“Truly, Madly, Sweetly” (8 p.m., Hallmark): Cupcake food truck owner Natalie (Nikki DeLoach) and Eric (Dylan Neal), a divorced single dad and finance manager, meet in San Francisco after his aunt dies and — given her long-standing fondness for Natalie’s confections — bequeaths them jointly a building that once housed a celebrated bakery. After selling the property to split the funds turns out to be complicated, the pair decide to renovate the bakery and reopen it.

“Iyanla, Fix My Life” (8 p.m., 11 p.m., OWN): In the conclusion to a compelling two-part episode, the new “Female Felons: Healing is the New Black (Part 2)” finds Matilda, Iyanla’s client, facing a day of reckoning. For years, this ex-convict thought she had succeeded in keeping her two worlds separated, but now that the cat’s out of the bag, she’s confronted by the unpleasantness of having her “prison daughters” and her biological offspring taking the stand to testify against her.

“Mind Your Business With Mahisha” (9 p.m., 12 a.m., OWN): Mahisha may be biting off more than she can chew when she visits a small popcorn company that’s suffering from a huge production problem in the new episode “It’s Poppin’ Off at Aunt Emma’s Popcorn.” This niche company is struggling for its very survival, but what seems like an obvious solution to Mahisha — releasing the popular recipe for mass production — is being stonewalled by the stubborn owner of the business.

Many players are not confident in bidding to slam without using the Blackwood convention to ask for aces. Experts hold Blackwood in high esteem, but they will often prefer looking for slam via cue bidding.

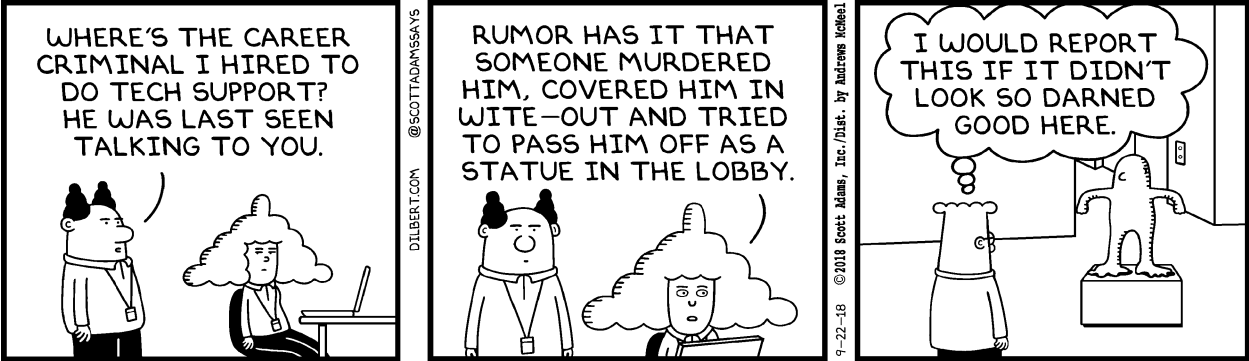

The four-diamond bid and the four-heart bid were both cue bids. South's five-club bid was a sign-off denying a spade control. When North continued with a five-diamond cue bid, this revealed a world of information to South. North had to have a spade control. He would not continue toward slam without a spade control after South had denied one. Furthermore, North's bid was a grand slam try! They couldn't go back and play in five clubs, so North was not willing to settle for six clubs just yet. Because North's bid was an effort to reach seven clubs, he had to have a first-round spade control — either the ace or a void.

South didn't have any particular interest in a grand slam, but he did have two more trumps than North could reasonably expect, so he bid five no trump rather than six clubs. This sent the message that he was not able to cue bid anything at the five level, but he might have a suitable hand for seven clubs. That was all the encouragement North needed and the grand slam was reached.

There was nothing to the play. South discarded his losing heart on the ace of diamonds and ruffed two spades in the dummy for 13 tricks. Nice bidding!

Ugly twist in Russell saga — and no hint of its outcome

The Cubs made a point of saying they were staying out of Major League Baseball's investigation into domestic abuse allegations against shortstop Addison Russell by his then-wife, trusting the process would play out.

But MLB's investigation, which began in June of 2017, was open-ended and never closed.

That led most to believe Russell either was exonerated or there was not enough evidence to suspend him under the league's domestic violence policy. With no one saying a word about it and Russell continuing to play, what else was there to conclude?

The Cubs seemed caught off guard Friday when an Instagram post from Melisa Reidy-Russell surfaced Thursday alleging her now-former husband abused her physically and emotionally.

Manager Joe Maddon said he thought the investigation was over.

"From our perspective it seemed like it had been done a while ago," Maddon said Friday. "But apparently it's not."

Cubs President Theo Epstein said he was aware the investigation was open, and had been "in touch from time to time" with the league to let them know they were "fully cooperative" with it.

"Surprised? Yeah, certainly," Epstein said, adding he reached out to MLB after reading the former wife's post, which he called "disturbing."

The Cubs reached out to her last year when the original allegations surfaced, Epstein said at

Sox praise Quintana but show no mercy in rolling to victory

By PHIL ROGERS
Chicago Tribune

Jose Abreu was thinking about Jose Quintana, his former White Sox teammate, when he arrived at Guaranteed Rate Field before noon Friday.

"He was great as a teammate," Abreu said. "He was a class act."

Abreu shot Quintana a quick text message, telling him "good luck" in his first start against the Sox. That was the last act of kindness the Sox directed toward Quintana or anyone with the Cubs.

They spent the rest of the 74-degree day pounding the left-hander and his first-place teammates from the North Side, beating the Cubs 10-4 as the City Series resumed after a four-month break. It's tied two games apiece with two left to play this weekend.

The loss capped a generally troubling day for the Cubs. Shortstop Addison Russell was placed on administrative leave by Major League Baseball following new allegations of domestic abuse, creating an untimely distraction as they try to win a third consecutive division title.

Their lead in the National League Central dropped to two games over the Brewers, pending Milwaukee's game in Pittsburgh.

Quintana's first career start against the Sox was the most intriguing element of the matchup, but Reynaldo Lopez (7-9) unsurprisingly stole the show.

Lopez has quietly been terrific down the stretch in his first full major-league season, going 3-0 with a 1.13 ERA in his last six starts. He has given up only 24 hits and nine walks while striking out 43 in 39⅓ innings.

Lopez said he was pumped to find out he was going against Quintana.

Robinson, Trubisky 'on the cusp' of big plays

By COLLEEN KANE
Chicago Tribune

Bears wide receiver Allen Robinson said he stopped worrying about how his surgically repaired left knee would hold up to exertion about halfway through training camp.

Instead, the bigger obstacle over the first two weeks of the season has been about "getting back into game form."

Before the opener against the Packers, Robinson hadn't played a full regular-season game since the end of the 2016 season because he was injured on the first passing play of the Jaguars' first game in 2017. He played just 11 preseason snaps in August.

As the Bears head to Glendale, Ariz., to face the struggling Cardinals on Sunday, they're happy to see he's finding his groove. Robinson has 14 catches for 144 yards, including 10 catches for 83 yards Monday against the Seahawks.

"I know I'm 100 percent and I'm know I'm healthy," Robinson said Friday. "It's just all the time really thinking about the details and focusing on getting in and out of all of the cuts how I want to and I'm accustomed to. Even in certain routes that I may not have run against a certain leverage. When you get into games, everything is unpredictable, and that's when you get a genuine feel for everything."

Though five of his catches went for first downs against the Seahawks, Robinson's longest catches were for 13 yards in the first quarter and 14 yards in the third. The Seahawks defense allowed Mitch Trubisky to string together short, quick passes, but Robinson said he believes downfield, game-breaking plays are well within reach.

"We're right on the cusp of that," Robinson said. "Last week it was really taking what the defense is giving us, moving the chains, getting into the red zone and trying to get points."

Offensive coordinator Mark Helfrich said he sees a chemistry building between Trubisky and Robinson. And while Helfrich said there were a few routes to clean up from Monday night's game, he was encouraged by what he saw from Robinson.

"He's confident now," Helfrich said. "You never know with that kind of an injury how a guy is mentally approaching things, and that's a huge, huge hurdle to get over, (to say), 'Hey, I'm good.' And that's big."

Injury report: Cornerback Marcus Cooper (hamstring) and safety DeAndre Houston Carson (broken forearm) were ruled out for Sunday's game. Coach Matt Nagy said Cooper injured his hamstring at the end of practice Thursday. He said rookie Kevin Toliver likely would be the fourth cornerback option behind starters Prince Amukamara and Kyle Fuller and nickel Bryce Callahan.

the time, though he declined to discuss what was said, adding the investigation is “exclusively the territory of MLB.” Russell denied the allegations in ’17, and Epstein said he denied them again Friday during their conversation. Later, Russell released a statement through the MLB Players Association reaffirming his denial. Epstein and Maddon said they don’t really know Russell outside his job, which sounds insensitive considering a “baseball family” usually is portrayed as being tight-knit. But does anyone know what their co-workers do when they leave work? A baseball player is actually an employee, not a family member, no matter how happy everyone looks on the team’s Twitter account.

The one who should know Russell best is his agent, Scott Boras, who said at the 2017 All-Star game in Miami he was confident Russell eventually would be absolved.

“I think we know the facts of that and the foundation of social media,” Boras said that day. “I don’t think there is any support to (the allegation).”

Boras was referring to the fact an alleged friend of Russell’s wife made the initial allegation on Instagram. Reidy-Russell filed for divorce June 21, 2017, shortly after she claimed on social media that he had cheated on her. The divorce became official in August.

Boras declined to criticize the MLB investigation’s slow progress, which was then only a few weeks old.

“I’m sure there is a thoroughness that’s the standard they have,” he said. “There may be more that they want to look into. There has been no support for any of the claims made, and immediately the next day the (post) was erased.”

Boras’ insinuation was the removal of the post meant the allegation was false. Either way, the 2017 season continued, and the investigation went on without any further updates.

Any idea Cubs fans would disown Russell quickly dissipated. When he brought out a tray of nachos to a Cardinals fan in a game at Busch Stadium after causing a spill while chasing a foul ball into the stands, the video went viral and Russell’s “nice guy” reputation seemed intact.

The only one publicly complaining about the progress of the MLB investigation was Brewers pitcher Matt Garza, who was overheard shouting last September during a teammate’s postgame interview after a Cubs-Brewers game, claiming Russell was being granted favorable treatment from MLB and should have been suspended like other players accused of domestic abuse.

After the season ended and Garza became a free agent, he claimed on Twitter the Brewers had “silenced” him after his complaint.

“I listened!” Garza tweeted. “My fault for being an enabler. Check with my ex-public relations team.”

After the season’s end, a Brewers employee said they knew nothing about Garza’s Twitter rant against Russell and the MLB investigation. A person with knowledge of the investigation told me in November it remained open because Reidy-Russell would not agree to be interviewed, so there was no way to move on.

No one brought it up in spring training of 2018 and Russell continued to play without having to deal with any messy allegations hanging over his head. He told reporters in Arizona he thought he would be traded, and was glad to stay a Cub.

All was quiet until Thursday night when the media revealed the blog post. Epstein and Chairman Tom Ricketts appeared together at a news conference Friday before the start of the City Series, and the main message was to wait for the league’s investigation to play out while Russell had been put on paid administrative leave.

“We intend to cooperate with the process and let the league do (its) job,” Ricketts said.

That makes sense, though the process has been playing out for more than a year now. MLB should have made it clear it was still ongoing, and spelled out the reason why there had been no resolution.

What this means for Russell’s immediate future is unknown, but it’s hard to imagine him playing for the Cubs again this season. He almost certainly would be a distraction in the playoffs and any issues he had on the field likely would be traced to his current mental state with the latest allegations hanging over him.

As for the long term it’s too soon to speculate on what the Cubs will do. The facts still aren’t out and Reidy-Russell apparently still hasn’t cooperated with the MLB investigation.

It’s as open-ended today as it was 15 months ago.

“It’s always a good feeling when you’re facing a guy like him,” Lopez said. “He was a very good teammate with me and when you’re facing another Latino, it’s always an extra excitement, especially when you’re facing a guy like him.”

Daniel Murphy led off the game by hitting a 3-2 changeup into the right-field seats, keeping the ball just inside the foul pole. But Lopez allowed only two other runners to reach second base in his seven innings.

He elevated 97- and 98-mph fastballs to pile up eight strikeouts while not walking anyone. He threw 72 fastballs out of 108 pitches, getting 10 swing-and-misses on the four-seamer.

Murphy credited Lopez for disrupting hitters’ timing. “It looked like he did a good job, especially when runners got on, of altering his times to the plate,” he said. “He got that live fastball going, middle to top of the strike zone, which is really tough.”

Lopez has lowered his ERA from 4.57 at the end of July to 3.94, with only one more start left this season.

“I set my goal to finish this season with my ERA below 4.00, and now I know my ERA is below that number,” Lopez said. “I want to finish the season strong.”

The Sox strung together five consecutive hits in the second inning off Quintana (13-11), grabbing control.

Singles by Matt Davidson and Welington Castillo were followed by Kevan Smith’s long home run to left. Daniel Palka delivered his fourth pinch-hit homer of the season in the sixth, setting a Sox record.

The Sox outthit the Cubs 19-9, and Lopez was tough with the lead.

“Their pitcher was good,” Cubs manager Joe Maddon said. “He threw the ball very well. I was watching him on video Thursday and even this morning. He’s got some good stuff. ... A big part of why we didn’t look so good was him. He was that good.”

Have you ever been afraid to smile?

Are you unhappy with the way your teeth look? Are you having trouble eating? As dental implants become increasingly popular, patients discover that they can achieve a lot more than just to repair a smile. There are numerous quality of life benefits that result from the procedure.

Most prosthodontists agree that dental implants are the best choice for natural and effective tooth restoration available, regardless of the state of your jaw!

Get your smile back!

Dental implants are placed into your bone to simulate the roots of a natural tooth. The implant keeps the bone strengthened which, in turn, keeps your jaw from thinning. Dental implants not only repair beautiful smiles, but they also maintain the natural structure of the face!

Eating can be easier.

You can enjoy eating again! Dental implants allow patients to chew as they once did with their natural teeth. Food can stick to the gums and cause irritation. With dental implants, you can maintain your natural chewing pattern without fear of dentures slipping or loose teeth falling out. You can avoid food scratching at your gums when you bite down, and you can enjoy your meal without food sticking to your gums.

Improved self-esteem.

Don’t be afraid to smile! Dental implants function and look just like your natural teeth. No need to worry about hiding your teeth when you smile or having your teeth fall out while you’re eating. Dental implants can improve your appearance and make your day-to-day life more comfortable.

Better health.

With proper care, your overall oral health will improve with dental implants. Decreasing the gaps and decaying teeth in your mouth will decrease the areas for bacteria to spread. In turn, this can help prevent gingivitis and other oral diseases.

Are you a candidate?

The great news is nearly everyone is a candidate for dental implants. For information on how dental implants can change your life, please call EON Clinics at 312-827-6453 and schedule your FREE consultation.

Russell’s future in flux

Besides off-field trouble, injuries, slumps could make him expendable

By MARK GONZALES
Chicago Tribune

Addison Russell was in the midst of his second consecutive subpar season, as injuries to his left middle finger and right throwing shoulder hampered the short-sop while the rangier and stronger-armed Javier Baez made 23 starts at short after he earned All-Star honors as a second baseman.

But in the wake of new allegations of domestic abuse from Russell’s former wife that prompted Major League Baseball to place Russell on administrative leave Friday, his role as part of the young core that the Cubs expect to help them compete for championships annually is in flux.

While the Cubs cannot impose their own discipline or penalties during the investigation of the newest allegations from Melisa Reidy-Russell — a process that is expected to take at least seven days — Russell’s on- and off-the-field struggles have made his long-term status vulnerable.

“It’s not appropriate to speculate while this step is going on,” Cubs President Theo Epstein said with Chairman Tom Ricketts at his side. “The whole point of the administrative leave is to provide a better forum for (MLB) to conduct its fact finding and investigation to ultimately come to a determination of what occurred, and then find appropriate discipline.

“While we’re in that step, it makes sense to step back and give our support to the process, and this step is built in to provide an accuser and the accused with rights, and to ultimately find a just and fair resolution.

“Beyond saying that, ‘Yes, the account was disturbing,’ we take it extremely seriously. The way we can best contribute at this point is to cooperate and allow the process to play out.”

Meanwhile, the Cubs likely will finish the season with Baez at shortstop — his natural position. They have four adequate second basemen: Daniel Murphy, David Bote, Ben Zobrist and Tommy La Stella.

Russell, 24, hasn’t come close to matching his production of 2016, when he hit 21 home runs and drove in 95 runs. He played in only 110 games in 2017, missing six weeks because of a foot injury and three games after the initial allegations involving domestic abuse of his then-wife surfaced through a third party on social media.

The Cubs elected to keep their young core together after receiving underwhelming offers while seeking young controllable starting pitching last winter.

Even if Russell’s situation is resolved amicably, the Cubs would have to decide whether Russell would be worth keeping as a second-year arbitration-eligible player whose offense declined for the second consecutive season, one in which he earned $3.2 million.

“Offensively, it hasn’t been his typical year,” manager Joe Maddon said.

Russell is batting .250 with five home runs and 38 RBIs and has no home runs since June 29, about four weeks after he injured his finger.

The fresh allegations from Reidy-Russell could convince the Cubs he’s not worth keeping despite a statement Russell issued through the MLBPA: “These allegations are completely false. I made that clear to Major League Baseball last year and reiterated it to the Cubs today. I’m confident any full and fair investigation will fully exonerate me. The protection of my children is foremost in my mind so I will have no further comment.”

Epstein said he contacted MLB after reading Reidy-Russell’s blog late Thursday night, and he and Ricketts spoke to league officials before informing Russell of his status in a face-to-face meeting at their Wrigley Field offices.

The Cubs were criticized in July 2016 after a trade with the Yankees brought them closer Aroldis Chapman, who allegedly choked his girlfriend and fired eight gunshots in his garage nine months earlier. Inconsistencies in the allegations resulted in MLB assessing a 30-game suspension three months before the trade for reckless use of the firearm in the presence of his girlfriend.

MLB’s attempts to investigate Russell in June 2017 were curtailed because a third party made the initial allegations and Reidy-Russell didn’t press charges.

“I think given the facts last year, we handled it appropriately,” Epstein said. “And given the new information that came to light ... early this morning, we’re also handling it appropriately.”

CUBS NOTES

Lopez’s gem silences Cubs

By MARK GONZALES
Chicago Tribune

The Cubs’ biggest short-term problem Friday wasn’t coping with questions stemming from a fresh investigation involving allegations of domestic abuse against shortstop Addison Russell.

On the field, they couldn’t get to White Sox starter Reynaldo Lopez.

The Cubs collectively gave credit to Lopez, who struck out eight and allowed five hits in seven innings hours after learning the latest on Russell, who could remain on leave for the rest of the regular season.

“It’s unfortunate,” outfielder Kyle Schwarber said. “Like we all said, the process is going forward, the investigation will have to go on. We don’t have the facts.

And that includes?

“Controlling the things you can control,” second baseman Daniel Murphy said. “You come to the ballpark ready to play, seeing what you can do to help the club win. That’s within our control.”

And regrouping for Saturday night’s game.

Maddon reiterated. “Let’s just trust in the power of 24 hours. Let’s just come back and play our game Saturday and not get caught up in one game.”

Q clobbered: Jose Quintana’s former team tagged him for five runs in five innings in his first start since he was traded to the Cubs in July 2017 for top prospects Eloy Jimenez and Dylan Cease.

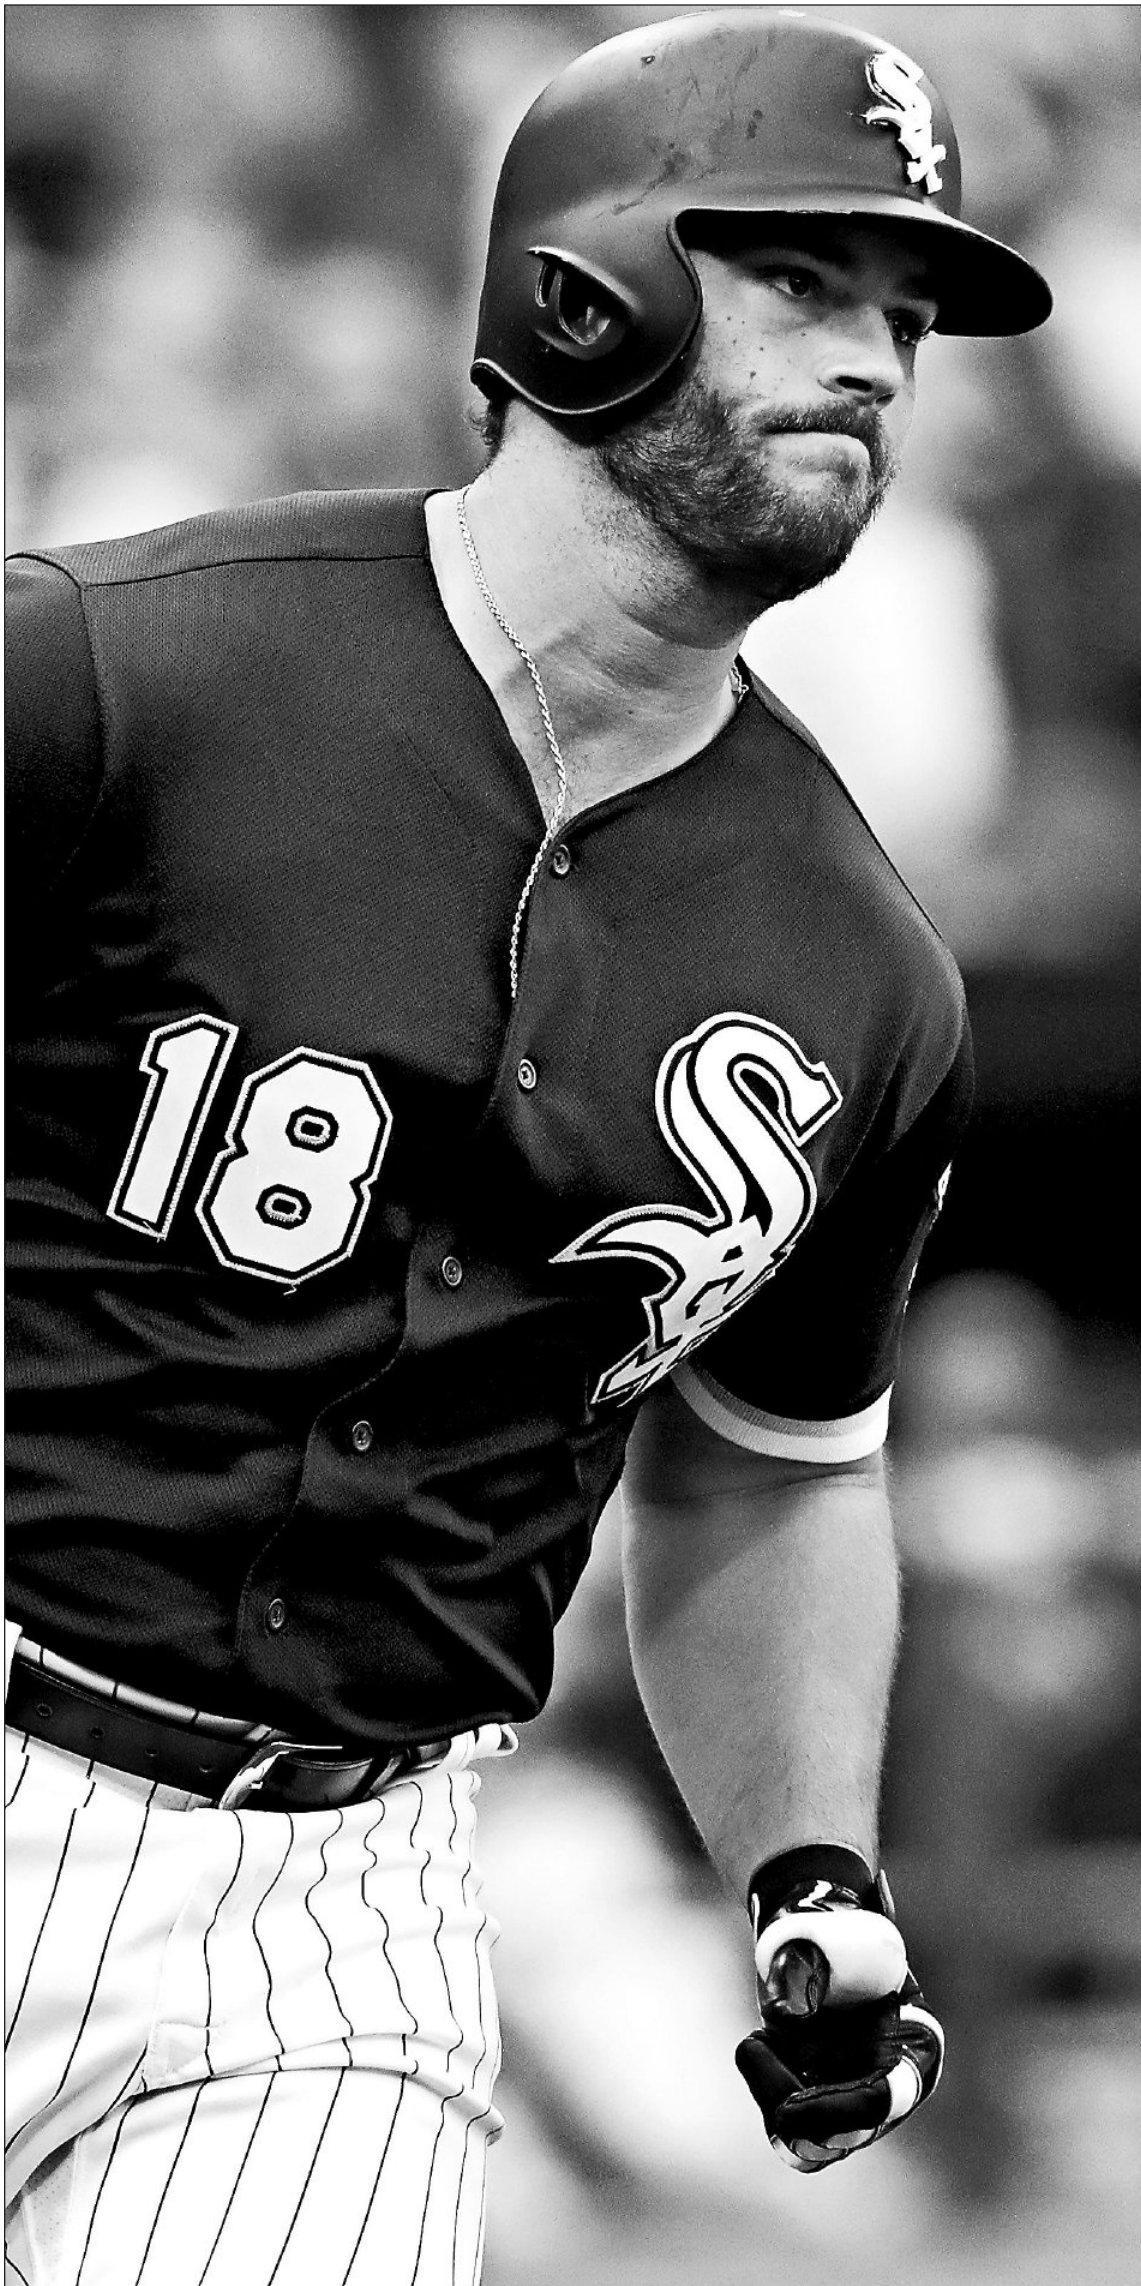

“One pitch changed the game,” said Quintana, referring to Kevan Smith’s three-run homer in the middle of a stretch of five consecutive hits allowed.

“Everything was the same. I threw a lot of years here, and it was good to be back. I tried to give a good show for the fans, but I feel bad with that. I don’t have time for stopping. I want to do better in the next (start).”

Schwarber returns: Schwarber returned to the Cubs’ lineup for the first time since Sept. 8 after missing time with a stiff back and believed his timing improved with each at-bat.

The next step for Schwarber, who went 0-for-4 with two strikeouts, will be testing his back to see if he can return to left field after performing designated-hitter duties Friday.

“I feel like I can go out there and do it,” Schwarber said. “It’s going to be a day-by-day thing.”

WHITE SOX NOTES

Palka making bid for ’19 roster spot

By PHIL ROGERS
Chicago Tribune

When the White Sox promoted Daniel Palka to the big leagues in late April, he arrived determined to have staying power.

“I just wanted to make sure I made the most of every opportunity I got and made sure I produced enough so that the question was there, that maybe I would have to stay,” Palka said Friday after the Sox’s 10-4 victory over the Cubs. “In my mind, I’m not surprised.

Palka seems to have turned the potential cameo into a job that will extend into 2019 and possibly beyond. His pinch-hit home run off Dillon Maples on Friday was his fourth this season — setting a Sox record — and his 27th homer overall, which leads major-league rookies.

While Palka’s fielding remains rough in the outfield corners, he seems to have a good shot to go into next season as the Sox’s primary designated hitter. He’s hitting .242 with 64 RBIs in 388 at-bats.

“He’s a young man who understands and appreciates the opportunity that’s been presented to him,” manager Rick Renteria said. “He’s thrived. He’s had really big moments for us in key situations.

“He’s worked extremely hard to put himself on the map, to be part of our conversation as an organization.”

Palka has hit 30 home runs overall this season. He hit 34 two seasons ago between the Twins’ Double- and Triple-A teams.

Missing man: Jose Abreu hopes to get back on the field this season but seems unlikely to be available for the weekend series after being hospitalized Monday in Cleveland. He was treated for an infection in his right thigh and was reexamined Friday in Chicago.

“Everybody knows I like to play,” Abreu said through Sox interpreter Billy Russo. “It doesn’t matter if I’m in pain or not. I’m a TV/radio: 11 a.m. Saturday; ABC-7, WMVP-AM 1000.

Line: Notre Dame by 8.
Records: Notre Dame 3-0; Wake Forest 2-1.

KEYS TO THE GAME

1. Disrupt Wake Forest's tempo.
The Demon Deacons ran a school-record 105 plays in last week's 41-34 loss to Boston College, the second time this season they've surpassed 90 plays. Ball State tested Notre Dame's endurance in Week 2 by running 97 plays. Coach Brian Kelly stressed the importance of third-down stops. Wake Forest is converting 44 percent of its third downs (46th nationally), while Notre Dame is holding opponents to 39 percent (82nd).
2. Slow Greg Dortch.
Kelly called the Wake Forest wide receiver an "electric" player. Dortch leads the nation with 224.7 all-purpose yards per game. He has 28 catches for 336 yards and a touchdown as the top target for freshman quarterback Sam Hartman, and he's also a threat on special teams. He returned two punts for touchdowns against Towson on Sept. 8 and has 10 punt returns this season for 70 yards. Notre Dame will try to defend him with cornerbacks Julian Love and Troy Pride Jr., who are off to strong starts. Love has broken up eight passes, and Pride has one interception and four pass breakups.
3. Attempt a few deep passes.
Wake Forest surrendered 304 passing yards and five touchdowns against Boston College. The touchdown passes were 27, 35, 29, 71 and 40 yards. That could be a winning formula for the Irish, with receivers Miles Boykin, Chase Claypool and Chris Finke benefiting. But which quarterback will have more chances to test Wake Forest's secondary? When asked Thursday, Kelly wouldn't say whether Brandon Wim-bush or Ian Book would start, stating, "They're both going to play."

THE WINNER

LaMond Pope's pick: Notre Dame's defense will be fresh enough to make a big play late, and the Irish will escape with a tough road victory. Notre Dame 28, Wake Forest 24.

When was the last time Illinois played a top-10 team and had a prayer at halftime? How about the third quarter?
That fun vibe and realistic hope vanished quickly in the fourth quarter as No. 10 Penn State pulled away for a 63-24 victory Friday night at Memorial Stadium.
Coach Lovie Smith's team seemed to be fulfilling his pre-season promise that fans would see progress this season. Illinois was in position to beat South Florida last week before a late-game touchdown foiled that plan, and was competitive with Penn State for three quarters.
The Illini took a 24-21 lead on Penn State on a third-quarter trick play in the red zone as wide receiver Trenard Davis — a former quarterback — took a reverse and threw a 17-yard end zone pass to Ricky Smalling. They trailed just 21-17 at half-time.
The run game behind Reggie Corbin and Mike Epstein kept Illinois battling in the first half as freshman quarterback MJ Rivers — making his second straight start in place of injured AJ Bush Jr. — managed the game well until his first career interception in the fourth quarter.
Illinois snagged two turnovers in the first half — a stunning accomplishment completed in every game so far this season — with Michael Marchese's fumble recovery and Delano Ware's first career interception. But the unit again gave up too many yards and big game-defining plays.
And Penn State (4-0) dominated the fourth quarter. A minute into it the student section was clearing out in droves. Penn State scored two quick touchdowns in the period to take control 42-24 with 14 minutes remaining.

Illinois (2-2) especially struggled to contain sure-footed Penn State running back Miles Sanders, who gained 200 yards rushing and scored three touchdowns.
Penn State, which has a show-down looming next week against Ohio State, helped Illinois with costly penalties such as a roughing-the-passer flag on third down and a pass-interference call on the drive on which Illinois took the lead. The Nittany Lions found their groove as quarterback Trace McSorley completed 12 of 19 passes for 160 yards and three touchdowns. He also rushed for 92 yards.
Illinois has not beaten a ranked opponent since defeating No. 22 Arizona State in 2011. The last time the Illini beat a top-10 opponent was an upset of No. 1 Ohio State in 2007.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS AT FLORIDA STATE

NIU targets Power 5 road victory

BY BOB FERRANTE
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Rod Carey's first game as Northern Illinois head coach came against Florida State in the 2013 Orange Bowl. When Dave Doeren left to take the N.C. State job in December 2012, Carey was promoted from offensive coordinator and has led the Huskies to a 45-26 record since.
"That was a special time for all of us," said Carey, who brings the Huskies to Tallahassee for Saturday's game against the Seminoles. "Going to the Orange Bowl, this program, this university, this city and obviously me personally ... it was such a blur."
"Experience is the biggest way I've changed. Understanding that you're never ready for this job. You need to have good people around you. Coaches are like quarterbacks — we get way too much credit and get way too much blame."
NIU is facing Florida State for a $1.6 million guarantee. Administrators have used the paydays — the Huskies also visited Iowa in Week 1 and travel to BYU on Oct. 27 — to help fund football and athletics at the school, while players have embraced a tradition of not just playing Power Five teams but often beating them.

The Huskies have pulled off six road wins against Power Five opponents since 2009, including a 21-17 victory at Nebraska in 2017.
"Our job is to be disruptive and win our one-on-ones," Carey said. "I think we have a good opportunity to do that."
As for Carey's counterpart Saturday, Willie Taggart remains optimistic despite the rough start to his first season with the Seminoles.
Taggart has just one win in his first three games in Tallahassee, but that's not new for him. Taggart went 2-10 in his first seasons at Western Kentucky (2010) and South Florida (2013). And while he started 4-1 last year in his only season at Oregon, the Ducks finished the regular season 7-5.
"We all want things right now, including myself," Taggart said. "But we've all got to understand that sometimes they don't come our way, but we've got to find answers and stay the course."

Taggart remains focused on the road ahead.
He is defiant that the Seminoles' offensive line problems are correctable in practice through better fundamentals and technique. He has supported quarterback Deondre Francois, who has struggled to make quick decisions in the face of a constant pass rush. And he is encouraged about the performance of the defense, which has kept the Seminoles in games despite being forced to stay on the field for long stretches.
The Seminoles (1-2) have scored only 10 points in their losses to FBS teams, the same number of sacks they have allowed. They will be without their top linemen, Landon Dickerson and Derrick Kelly, on Saturday.
Both offenses could use a reboot. NIU has scored 37 points in three games, while Florida State has scored 46 — 36 of them coming in a comeback win over FCS foe Samford.
The Huskies have the lowest-ranked total offense among the nation's 130 FBS teams (241 yards per game) and rank 128th in scoring (12.3 points per game). Florida State is 111th in total offense (340.3 ypg) and 123rd in scoring (15.3 ppg).

NFL

Bears iffy as road favorites

BY RICH CAMPBELL
AND DAN WIEDERER
Chicago Tribune

Tribune reporters Rich Campbell and Dan Wiederer are picking against the spread and each other this season. And Campbell is puffy-chested coming off a perfect 7-0 week.
(10 points for a win, minus-10 for a loss)
Season scoreboard: Campbell 80, Wiederer 0

Game of the week

Saints (plus 3) at Falcons
Campbell (2-0): Falcons. They're without Deion Jones and Keanu Neal, but they have beaten the Saints in Atlanta in each of the last two seasons. The Saints are giving up 7.02 yards per play and 10.7 yards per pass, worst in the NFL in both categories. Matt Ryan has enough weapons, including rookie Calvin Ridley (16 yards-per-catch average), to take advantage.
Wiederer (0-2): Saints. In an attempt to get off the schneid in this category, I'll buy low on the Saints, even on the road and coming off an unimpressive home victory over the Browns. In a storyline getting little attention, Drew Brees is only three or four weeks from becoming the league's all-time leader in passing yards.

Lock of the week

Campbell (1-1): Packers (minus 3) at Redskins. The Redskins lost by 12 at home to the Colts last Sunday. Now they're getting only 3 against Aaron Rodgers. What am I missing here? The Redskins hardly pressured Andrew Luck last week and couldn't run the ball. The Packers are a bit banged up in the secondary but have depth.
Wiederer (1-1): 49ers (plus 7) at Chiefs. Patrick Mahomes is on pace for 80 touchdown passes. Somehow, it's difficult to see him keeping that up. I'm probably riding too hard with an all-too-ordinary 49ers team right now. But staying within a touchdown shouldn't be too demanding.

Upset of the week

Campbell (2-0): Colts (+230) at Eagles. Dan doesn't like me picking underdogs with such low money lines, so I'll give him a break, especially since he's backing it up with a big underdog pick. Obviously the Buccaneers (+105) at home against the Steelers is the safest bet. But in the spirit of competition, I'll go with Luck over the returning Carson Wentz.
Wiederer (1-1): Chargers (+250) at Rams. Admittedly, there's not a lot to choose from this week. And I have a funny feeling about this one. The Chargers have the toys on offense to challenge the Rams' vaunted defense. And this will be the Chargers' least taxing "road" trip of the season.

Close to home

Bears (minus 6) at Cardinals
Campbell (2-0): Bears. Disclaimer: My confidence level is low. They haven't been favored by this many points on the road since they gave the Cardinals (coincidentally) seven on Dec. 23, 2012. Can Mitch Trubisky handle the Cardinals blitzes? The bet here is he does OK, while the Bears defense locks down a lifeless Cardinals offense.
Wiederer (2-0): Cardinals. The Bears defense is plenty good enough to control this one. But the offense hasn't proved it's potent enough to spark a blowout. The Cardinals have been outscored 58-6 in their first 0-2 start since 2005. But it's rare even for bad teams to get wiped out three straight weeks. Give me a Bears win and a Cardinals cover.

Close to home, total

Bears-Cardinals over/under: 38
Campbell (1-1): Under. These two offenses have combined for 39 points through two games. The Cardinals blitzes will challenge Trubisky to find his hot reads. And the Bears swarming defense will keep the Cardinals passing game in checkdown mode. It won't be pretty, but the Bears will take it.
Wiederer (0-2): Under. Through two weeks, the oddsmakers have been nearly perfect in setting the totals for Bears games. The Cardinals rank dead last in total offense (175 yards per game). And the Bears are only a few rungs up the ladder (29th, 282.5 ypg).

CHRIS SWEDA/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Roger Federer and Novak Djokovic get excited at the Laver Cup — but they later lost.

A warm welcome back for tennis

Passionate UC fans see Federer-Djokovic lose in Laver Cup

Championship tennis returned to the Windy City at 1:16 p.m. Friday when Grigor Dimitrov blasted an ace past American Frances Tiafoe.

One point for Team Europe, one giant leap for Chicago sports?

The Laver Cup is here. And judging by the size of the United Center crowd and the knowledge of the fans, this was long overdue.

The sounds were what you hear at grand slams — the hushed dialogue between points, the whistles after close calls, the rhythmic clapping that accompanies a player challenge, the screams for “C’mon, Frances!” after the Maryland native lost the first six points.

All the love for Team World finally paid off in the end.

The Euros won all three singles matches, but Team World won the final match of the night — and it was a beauty. American Jack Sock and Illinois alum Kevin Anderson thumped the dream team of Roger Federer and Novak Djokovic.

Federer and Djokovic had never played together before. Imagine having Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi on the same side. Or John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors.

Federer and Djokovic have 34 grand slam singles titles between them.

The match highlights included a moment of levity when Djokovic hit a forehand that didn’t reach the net. What blocked it? Federer’s derriere. Djokovic reacted in horror.

Federer closed out the first set with a winning volley, but he erred in the match-deciding tiebreaker, double-faulting at 4-4. Team World won the tiebreaker 10-6.

Sock’s earlier match also contained much drama. He won the second set over Britain’s Kyle Edmund but sputtered badly in a deciding tiebreaker. After falling behind 8-3, he fired a ball to the other end of the United Center, nearly making it to the 300 level.

“I was trying to give a shout-out to the (Michael) Jordan banner,” Sock joked.

Edmund finally won the tiebreaker, 10-6, marking a dreary end to a terrific match.

“I’m very disappointed in myself for not pulling that one out,” Sock said. “I played a shocking tiebreak.”

Asked after the match about his sore hip, Sock quipped: “When you have Jordan’s House chanting your name, it gets better.”

TEDDY GREENSTEIN
On tennis

Sock, who grew up in Nebraska and blossomed in Kansas City, recalled playing a tournament at the Midtown Athletic Club when he was 14.

“I got a taste of Chicago, and it always has been one of my favorite cities, especially when the weather is nice,” he said. “The city is sweet.”

And it has a sweet spot for tennis, especially team tennis. The second Laver Cup pits the top Europeans against the rest of the world. Teammates sit in a C-shaped couch alongside the court. Captains Bjorn Borg (Europe) and John McEnroe (World) sit with the competing player during changeovers, offering advice.

There are NBA-style introductions, and players wear shirts in the team color — blue for Europe, red for World.

The court is black, a striking look that provides a nice contrast for viewers. It’s a hard court, but the surface is relatively slow, promoting rallies.

The first team to 13 points wins the Laver Cup, with Saturday’s matches worth two and Sunday’s worth three.

“It hasn’t been the ideal start,” Sock said after his singles loss, “but the celebrations will be coming.”

The evening’s first match produced a host of mini-celebrations for Team World. But in the end, there was more heartbreak, leaving a 3-0 deficit.

Diego Schwartzman, the 5-7 Argentinian, battled Belgium’s David Goffin in a match that could not have been tighter.

After Schwartzman forced a tiebreaker by winning the second set, he fell apart. He trailed 7-3 in the first-to-10-point tiebreaker.

Down 6-7, he executed a half-volley drop shot that had an off-the-charts degree of difficulty. The winner prompted several World teammates to storm the court for high-fives. Schwartzman won six straight points and was in prime position to claim the match.

But down 9-7, Goffin earned his coffee with some dark closing skills. He won the final four points.

“Amazing atmosphere,” Goffin said. “I had to stay focused.”

He did, giving Europe a sweep of the first three matches before Team World claimed Friday’s finale.

BLACKHAWKS NOTES

Just 18, Boqvist might stick

By JIMMY GREENFIELD
Chicago Tribune

Adam Boqvist dismissed a scoring chance by Red Wings forward Andreas Athanasiou, one of the league’s fastest skaters, with such ease during Thursday night’s preseason game, it was hard to tell the veteran from the 18-year-old rookie.

Heck, with only two preseason games under his belt, Boqvist isn’t even a rookie yet.

But there he was, spotting Athanasiou picking up a pass at mid-ice, then forcing him to the inside and cleanly taking the puck from him to start the Blackhawks’ rush up ice.

It was the kind of play the Hawks hope to see for many years, and after Boqvist’s strong performance, coach Joel Quenneville said the youngster stands a chance at making the opening roster.

“I’m not throwing that out of the realm of possibilities,” Quenneville said.

Those words sent a mini shock through a training camp that, once Corey Crawford showed up, has featured no controversy and only a few roster battles. When the Hawks drafted Boqvist with the eighth pick in June, they did their best to temper expectations of a meteoric rise. He was 17 when he was drafted, and the timeline was set at about two to three years before he would be ready.

It still could take him that long, but Quenneville didn’t shy away from saying how much Boqvist has impressed him against the Wings and throughout camp.

“Real good patience level,” Quenneville said. “I liked his gap defensively. He does make a lot of plays and he’s always looking for plays. He has a good awareness for the overall game.”

Big comeback: The Hawks (1-2) got off to a slow start in their final preseason road game, falling behind two goals before rallying for a 5-2 victory over the Senators on Friday night in Ottawa.

Few of the Hawks likely regulars made the trip but the ones that did were instrumental in coming back from a 2-0 deficit. Early in the third period, Andreas Martinsen came out of the penalty box and found himself in a 2-on-1 break with Marcus Kruger, who one-timed a feed from Martinsen from the slot to give the Hawks a 3-2 lead. A few minutes later, Kruger returned the favor and backhanded a pass to Martinsen, whose wrist found its way through traffic.

Dylan Sikura, who was playing on the same line with older brother Tyler, finessed a saucer pass to Luke Johnson for a power-play goal to make it 2-1 with 3 minutes, 40 seconds left in the first. Dominik Kahun scored his first preseason goal in the second period and added a beautiful assist on a John Hayden goal late in the third. Collin Delia (17 saves) gave up both goals for the Hawks, who were outshot 14-1 to start the game.

Roster cuts: The Hawks are down to 44 players in camp after making several cuts Friday. Defenseman Nicolas Beaudin and forward MacKenzie Entwistle were reassigned to their junior teams, while defensemen Lucas Carlsson, Blake Hillman and Darren Raddysh, forwards Jacob Nilsson and Nathan Noel and goalie Kevin Lankinen were sent to Rockford. Forward Henrik Samuelsson was released from his tryout deal and will report to Rockford.

■ On the cool side as high temperatures peak in the upper 60s, about 5 degrees below normal.

■ Gentle east winds 5-10 mph.

■ Fair and quite cool overnight. Lows ranging from the upper 40s well inland to the upper 50s downtown.

NATIONAL FORECAST

It's been a warm September to date, punctuated by Thursday's record-breaking 93-degree high, but cooler weather is arriving just in time for the start of astronomical fall, which begins 8:54 p.m. Saturday evening. Saturday's highs should peak only in the middle and upper 60s, and Sunday morning's lows should drop into the chilly 40s in inland locations. Warmer days will return, however, with the mercury once again pushing 80 degrees Monday afternoon. Another batch of cooler air is expected to arrive Tuesday night as a second cold front traverses the area, dropping Wednesday's highs back into the 60s. The week's third cold front is expected to pass through the Chicago area Thursday night, bringing more cool weather Friday, though warmer weather is slated to return next week-end.

ASK TOM

Dear Tom,
I have a question regarding the origin of the word "muggy." Why does it refer to warm and humid conditions?

— R. Turnbull

Dear R.,
The American Meteorological Society's Glossary of Meteorology defines "muggy" as a colloquial term for warm and especially humid weather, and most dictionaries define the term as relating to warm or hot and humid conditions with little stirring of the air. It is frequently used to describe the weather on a calm, summer night when the dew point is near or above 70, and people perspire just sitting still. It is less often used during the day when winds are strong enough to lessen the impact of the humidity. Its origin seems to date back to the 1700s and the Norse word "mugga," which translates to drizzle or mist — weather conditions associated with extremely humid weather.

Earthquakes forward Chris Wondolowski enters Saturday's game with 142 career MLS goals, just three shy of matching Landon Donovan's record.

Quakes star Wondolowski closes in on MLS record

By JANIE MCCAULEY
Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Chris Wondolowski goes to work for the San Jose Earthquakes with little fanfare, the pursuit of Landon Donovan's Major League Soccer career scoring mark hardly weighing on his mind as he focuses his energy on providing an example for his teammates and the youth.

Wondo, as everyone calls him, played in college at tiny Division II Chico State, not part of an elite youth national team program. He didn't make his debut with the U.S. national team until six days before his 28th birthday in January 2011 — after he had already won the 2010 MLS Golden Boot for the first of his two scoring titles. When he scored a hat trick against Belize in the 2013 CONCACAF Gold Cup, he did it with his last name misspelled on the jersey: "W-O-N-D-O-W-L-O-W-S-K-I."

That unique, difficult path is what makes the record he is chasing all the more remarkable.

The 35-year-old Earthquakes forward enters Saturday's play with 142 goals, three shy of Donovan's record.

The Earthquakes provide regular "Wondo Watch" updates reminding everyone of where their captain stands.

"It's kind of one of those things it's pretty cool but for me right now it's just kind of a number," Wondolowski said after a recent practice at Avaya Stadium. "It's pretty amazing to be mentioned with Landon. It's good to be relevant in that sense but other than that I've kind of been more concentrating on this year trying to get some wins."

Wondolowski has eight goals and five assists with five matches remaining.

While Donovan isn't quite ready to give up his place on top, he also realizes Wondolowski's journey has been both unheralded and improbable.

"There are two pieces for me. One is the ego piece of being an athlete and always wanting to be on top of any list that you've worked hard to be on the top of," said Donovan, tied with Clint Dempsey for the national team record of 57 goals.

"But the human side of me understands how much Chris has worked to have this opportunity, and when you really dissect his career, he got a much, much, much later start than any of us did. And so if you would have put money on Chris getting to this point and this close to the all-time MLS goals record after his first few years where he almost never played, the odds would have been billions to one.

"So it's just remarkable what he's been able to do in less time than the rest of us and how consistent he's been."

And Wondolowski has shined right at home in his Bay Area backyard, having grown up in the East Bay suburb of Danville.

"I've been fortunate enough to talk to kids and things of that nature, and one of the things I've always mentioned was there are many paths to your goal and some are the short paths, some are long, some have obstacles and barriers, and to get over them and accomplish them and just stay along that path," he said.

"It's been crucial and important in my career."

Wondolowski still enjoys everything about his job, even the grind of training — and his teammates take notice of that positive, always-give-your-all spirit even during a down year.

Especially after the heartbreak in Brazil four years ago at the World Cup, then the Americans' failure to qualify for this year's World Cup in Russia.

Wondolowski may long be known for the goal he failed to score in Brazil, a monumental miss from close range in the final minute of second-half stoppage time at the 2014 World Cup as the Americans were eliminated with a 2-1 extra-time loss to Belgium in the round of 16.

He sailed that one-touch try wide and over the crossbar as the goalkeeper charged out.

"I'm gutted to have let down everyone but especially my teammates. It's been an incredible ride but I know this will make me stronger," he wrote on Twitter afterward.

Before Wondo even earned a spot on then-U.S. coach Jurgen Klinsmann's 23-man roster for the World Cup, his coach for the Earthquakes, Mark Watson, insisted the forward's best soccer was still ahead.

Donovan was cut from that team in a stunning move by Klinsmann, then while working as an analyst he criticized his former coach for not building the right roster to succeed on soccer's biggest stage.

Wondolowski didn't take it personally.

For now, Wondo is certainly still playing like he's in his prime. "He's 35 years old, and you can see that he's never happy with what he has achieved until now, so it's for for everybody to train every day with him because he wants to be always on top and to push us always to be our best," Earthquakes midfielder Jahmir Hyka said.

"I hope that he can break this record. It will also for his teammates be something good."

Donovan is widely considered the best player in MLS history, so matching his goals total would mean so much for Wondolowski — and Donovan is ready for the next young star to emerge and far surpass the number one day.

"In reality for us, Major League Soccer is so young," Donovan said. "If these records are not being broken there's a big problem. It means we're not progressing, and we all want soccer to get better. So if this were baseball that's been around 100-plus years, there are certainly records, Cal Ripken's, that likely will never be broken. But we're very young in our history here so you want these records to be broken."

"You want people coming along and shattering these records, because it means the league is getting better and soccer is getting better."

"With all respect to Wondo, I hope when he breaks it the record gets broken again and again and again."

Niners assistant Sowers making NFL history

BY VAHE GREGORIAN

Kansas City Star

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — On any given Sunday in the predominantly Mennonite mid-Kansas community of Hesston (population approximately 3,800), the scene played out about like this:

Twins Katie and Liz Sowers would finish up Sunday dinner (aka lunch), put together their list of eligible players and call the boys one by one to set up a game of tackle football.

Typically, that meant some rough-and-tumble three-on-three ball in a rotation of backyards. Sometimes, a boy might opt to referee, which wasn't a necessity for the games but made for a face-saving way out for those who thought the girls tackled too hard.

"I remember we would make boys cry," 49ers assistant coach Katie Sowers said, laughing and adding some of that might have come from their technique: Seize "their shirts, spin them around and throw them down."

With no formal opportunities to play football then, this was as close as the girls could get to the game that fascinated Katie enough that as an 8-year-old she was constantly writing about her love of the game.

Among what she called "journal entry after journal entry after journal," maybe nothing said it better than this one from about age 8: "My mom wants me to play basketball. I don't want to. I want to play football," she wrote, adding that her favorite part of the game was tackling or "tacoliling," as she spelled it then.

Even if they initially wanted to steer the girls to more conventional sports, parents Floyd and Bonnie indulged the attraction. When she was about 10, Sowers recalled, the girls got helmets and shoulder pads — "real helmets and real pads" — as Christmas gifts.

All of which turns out to be a lot more than cute memories.

Being encouraged to become who she is goes a long way towards explaining how Sowers on any given Sunday now is the NFL's second full-time woman coach, not to mention its first and only openly gay coach, man or woman.

With all that comes an enormous sense of appreciation and responsibility for Sowers, an offensive assistant for the 49ers.

"It's a fine line right now between wanting to be treated just like everybody else but also knowing that part of the job is making sure I'm visible for all the young people, boys and girls," she said.

There are many reasons Sowers has made it this far, not the least of which is sheer force of will and the essential help of former Chiefs general manager Scott Pioli (more on that in a minute).

But it starts at the start with her father, a former longtime women's basketball coach at Bethel College, and her mother, who for nearly four decades was the director of the Hesston College Nursing program.

"They were never trying to force us into a status quo; it was (about) what made us happy," she said this week as the 49ers prepared to play Sunday at Arrowhead Stadium, adding that they were immediately supportive when she came out during college. "They are the definition of unconditional love."

That's one of the reasons this will be an emotional return to the region for Sowers, 32, who is a former player with and general manager of the Kansas City Titans of the Women's Football Alliance and athletic director for Kansas City Parks and Recreation.

Her entire immediate family, including Liz and older sister Steph's family are in the area now. And so are her parents, who just celebrated their 50th anniversary even as they contend with the severe stroke Floyd Sowers suffered on a visit during Memorial Day weekend.

While he's "cognitively all there" and starting to get some movement back on his right side as Liz takes care of him full time, Katie Sowers said, he can't walk or speak now. So this is the only opportunity he'll have to attend one of her games for the foreseeable future.

"He's probably my biggest fan," she said, "so having him there is going to be special."

TONY AVELAR/AP

Katie Sowers is just the second female assistant coach in NFL history and the league's first openly gay coach, male or female.

No doubt he appreciates how special having her here in this role is, too.

Via a circuitous route that started in Hesston and gained momentum in Kalamazoo, Mich., when she started playing for the West Michigan Mayhem during what she calls her "victory lap" (getting the credits she needed to graduate) from Goshen College in Indiana and playing for Team USA.

It all came to a pivot point when she settled in Kansas City after getting her master's at Central Missouri.

Among her jobs at the time was coaching youth girls basketball, which led to meeting Pioli through his daughter, Mia.

Pioli had just lost his job with the Chiefs amid the chaos of his regime and was soon on his way to Atlanta as an assistant general manager. In the interim, he became what Sowers calls a second father figure and later helped bring her to Atlanta through the Bill Walsh Diversity Coaching Fellowship.

In contrast to Pioli's public profile running the Chiefs, and indicative of plenty more there than most perceive, he was a voice of wisdom and compassion with Sowers.

"He goes out of his way to help people, even knowing that there is nothing in return that he can probably get," she said.

Pioli also helped Sowers find a voice for her concerns about whether her sexual orientation might be a factor in her opportunities — as she had experienced before when denied a volunteer assistant job at Goshen.

She had been reluctant to tell him, realizing now that she herself had been stereotyping. But when it basically came up in casual conversation, he said, "Why didn't you tell me this before?"

"He even felt bad that I felt that way," she said, adding that he asked, "What can I do to seem more open?"

In Atlanta, she made an impression on then-offensive coordinator Kyle Shanahan and caught on with him in San Francisco through the Walsh program. Shanahan hired her last fall for a job that includes working with receivers, breaking down film and assisting with practice scripts.

"Just how she handled herself in the building with the players and in our meetings, it was a pretty easy decision for us," Shanahan said Wednesday, adding, "We thought we'd be worse (off) if we let her go. She helped our receivers, helped our receivers coach, there were things she added."

As for the matter of whether Sowers might be considered a trailblazer, Shanahan preferred to talk about her specifically.

"When you have someone who's like that, I don't really think about whether she's a man or a woman; I think about how much she can help us," he said, adding that it "depends on the individual."

In this case, as 49ers receiver Marquise Goodwin told the San Francisco Chronicle last season: "Katie is a baller, 100 percent. She understands the game. She's very familiar with the game. (She) definitely has the attitude it takes to be in that room. She brings a great vibe and she understands, so I'm happy that she's on staff."

Meanwhile, as much as normality is what Sowers strives for in this, she also made the decision last year to discuss her sexual orientation with Outsports. As she put it then, she wanted to help "create an environment that welcomes all types of people, no matter their race, gender, sexual orientation, religion and help ease the pain and burden that many carry every day."

After that interview was published, she said many players stopped by her office to lend their support and tell of siblings and friends who were gay.

Moreover, she said, part of being a great coach and leader who one day hopes to be an NFL head coach, part of having people believe what you're saying, is to have the integrity of being authentic and to "feel real."

Something she's just about always been able to feel — starting at home with being encouraged to become who she is.

"If it wasn't for my parents," she said, "I don't think I would even be close to where I am."

FIRST LOOK: 2019 FORD EDGE

Refreshed Edge adds tech, safety — and ST badge

By Ron Sessions, New York Daily News

Even though Ford rolled out a completely new Edge just three years ago, the market for SUVs is so hot right now that the company is giving its 5-seat midsize entry a significant refresh for 2019.

Part of a major shift in emphasis at Ford that will see the company reallocate some $7 billion of capital from future spending on sedans to the big money-makers (SUVs and trucks) such as the upcoming 2020 Bronco, the 2019 Ford Edge receives new front styling, increased power, a new 8-speed automatic transmission, safety and infotainment upgrades, and an all-new ST performance trim level.

With SE, SEL and Titanium trim, the 2019 Edge continues with the 2.0-liter turbocharged 4-cylinder engine, with output bumped from 245 horsepower to an even 250. Torque remains the same at 275 lb.-ft.

A new wide-ratio 8-speed automatic replaces last year's 6-speed automatic, bringing a lower first gear for improved launch acceleration and taller overdrive gears for more relaxed cruising. The 2019 Edge ditches the traditional PRNDL shifter in favor of a beefy rotary E-shifter knob on the console, like the one used in the current Fusion sedan. It frees up some console space for things like an available wireless phone charger.

Standard stop-start shuts off the engine at stoplights or when the Edge is stationary. EPA estimates for the 2019 model were not finalized as this preview was written, but Ford expects improvement to both the city and highway ratings.

Tech- tonic shift to connectivity and safety

Called the Edge SE, the base model gets more standard technology, such as voice-activated Sync 3 AppLink, which supports a new Ford+Alexa voice assistant app for accessing smart home controls, media content, calendar items, even shopping and other services while on the road (hopefully with minimal driver distraction).

A Wi-Fi hotspot with an imbedded modem is also standard, and is called FordPass Connect. It will work with up to 10 paired devices within 50 feet from the vehicle, so tailgate parties won't be starved for data (but maybe dip). With the FordPass app, an Edge owner can lock, unlock, locate and start their car using a smartphone app.

Mirroring the standardization of advanced safety systems in new models from Toyota and Honda, all 2019 Edge models will get a full suite of driver-assistive technology as standard equipment. This list includes automatic emergency braking to a full stop, blind spot and rear cross-traffic alert systems, lane departure warning and lane-keeping assist systems, automatic high-beam headlights, and more.

Also available for the first time in some Edge models will be evasive steering assist (to help a driver maneuver around an accident), adaptive cruise control with lane centering, and post-collision braking (to slow down and stop a vehicle after an initial impact to limit further risk and injury).

Ford has also upgraded the front structure of the 2019 Edge with the goal of improving its small-offset frontal impact performance in Insurance Institute for Highway Safety testing, aiming to raise the SUV's rating from "Acceptable" to "Good."

ST is an edgier Edge

At 46 percent, the current Edge has the highest female-buyer ratio of any Ford product. In a bid to widen the Edge's net and attract performance-oriented buyers, Ford is adding a testosterone-laden Edge ST variant to draw more Y-chromosome interest.

Replacing the previous Edge Sport, the new 2019 Ford Edge ST is the first of its kind in the company's SUV portfolio. Developed by the Ford Performance team, the Edge ST cops some attitude. And like the Focus ST and Fiesta ST, the Edge ST sports a gloss black mesh grille, aggressive-looking front fascia, ground-effects side skirts, and large-diameter dual exhaust outlets.

Inside, the ST is decked out with leather-and-suede-trimmed seats highlighted with silver accent stitching. The ST's front bucket seats (not Recaros, Ford-designed) receive added bolstering with increased bottom- and back-cushion lateral support. A digital instrument panel is customizable and can display a tachometer and a turbocharger boost gauge.

Beneath the ST's freshly sculpted hood is the twin-turbocharged 2.7-liter V6 from last year's Sport model, now boosted to 335 horsepower and 380 lb.-ft. of torque. That's a healthy increase of 20 horsepower (+6.3 percent) and 30 lb.-ft. of torque (+8.5 percent). Ford says it accomplished this with valve timing and other calibration changes.

A freer-flowing exhaust gives the ST some "voice" and, like the Focus ST, is bolstered by an active noise cancellation system that both reduces unwanted low-frequency booming sounds when cruising at low rpm and, under acceleration, enhances midrange "throatiness" from the intake piping via the SUV's audio speakers.

In order to effectively get all of the power to the ground, the Edge ST is equipped with standard all-wheel drive.

Putting more "sport" into sport-utility

As with the other ST versions, the Edge ST also receives stiffer springs, shocks and anti-roll bars, plus larger-diameter rear brakes. An optional high-performance brake system (not Brembo, says Ford) is also available, promising improved initial response and fade resistance. Both 20- and 21-inch wheels will be offered on the ST, and the latter can be fitted with summer performance tires.

The Edge ST's stability control system has a selectable "relaxed" setting that allows drivers to probe higher limits for more "fun" on twisty roads before intervening. A Sport mode button in the center of the rotary shifter enables quicker throttle response, holds lower gears longer and provides rev-matched downshifts.

Ford insists the Edge ST is not a hard-edged hotrod but rather an "everyday performance vehicle" with a firm but compliant ride. We'll have a chance to test that theory this coming August at the 2019 model's introduction to the media, right around the same time that the updated Edge and Edge ST go on sale.
